NEWS MELANGE FROM FAR EAST

Japs To Begin Forward Movement November 19.

RUSSIAN FORMATION ON THE SHAHKE RIVER

Reported Mikado's Men Have Advanced Across the Frozen River.

AN IMPORTANT ENGAGEMENT BELIEVED TO BE IMMINENT

Tokyo Despatches Assert Port Arthur Is Near the Extreme Limit of Resistance—Russian Captains Report Perhaps To Be Too Highly Colored—The End Predicted To Be Near at Hand—Cost of Czar's Railroad

St. Petersburg, Nov. 17—The following report from General Stoessel, commander at Port Arthur, dated October [illegible], was received today:

"The Japanese very vigorously bombarded the forts and entrenchments on [illegible] and northeast on October 2[illegible]. They attacked the north front [illegible] rapid fire dispersed their supports and the assault was repulsed. Our losses were one officer and [illegible] men killed and eight officers and about 300 men wounded. All distinguished themselves. It is impossible to mention individual heroes."

A Rumor

Rome, Nov. 17—The Chefoo correspondent of the Italia Militaire wires that General Stoessel's report brought to Chefoo by the torpedo boat destroyer Rastoropny states that since the commencement of the siege [illegible] soldiers and 10,000 civilians have died. The garrison is using primitive home made powder. The troops are on half rations and the civilians on quarter rations.

General Stoessel says the correspondent contents himself with explaining the plight of the garrison, implying that he awaits the Czar's orders as to surrender or continued resistance.

Vessels Sail

Jibutil, French Africa, Nov. 17—The vessels of the Baltic fleet which arrived off here on Monday sailed this morning.

The Russian Center

St. Petersburg, Nov. 17—It is reported that the Japanese intend to begin a forward movement November 19 in an attempt to break the center of the Russian formation on the Shahke river.

The correspondent of the newspaper [illegible] at the front wires that the Japanese are collecting large forces opposite the Russian eastern front. Scouts in that vicinity, he adds, brings the alarming report that the Japanese hold all the passes.

Across the River

London, Nov. 17—The Shanghai correspondent of the Post wires that word has reached there that the Japanese have advanced across the frozen Shahke river. An important engagement is believed to be imminent.

The Extreme Limit

London, Nov. 17—The Standard's despatch from Tokyo which [illegible] all indications point to the conclusion that Port Arthur is near the extreme limit of resistance. Most of the Russian shells do not explode and many of them are found to be old ones, shells filled half with sawdust and powder. Preparations appear to be made for a final retirement of General Stoessel and his garrison to Liaotishan.

Nearing the End

Tokyo, Nov. 17—In spite of Russian denials it is believed in Japanese circles that Port Arthur is near the end of the fight. It is pointed out that only the most serious emergency would cause the Russians deliberately to sacrifice their fastest destroyer in order to send despatches [illegible] the garrison is very short of ammunition for the big guns. It is the guns that have done all the damage to the Japanese works.

Glowing Reports

Rome, Nov. 17—The Chefoo correspondent of the Central News learns that a Russian official some [illegible] torpedo boat destroyer [illegible] which yesterday [illegible] and was later blown up left Port Arthur with an order from General Stoessel. This order contained a forecast of the [illegible] given [illegible] the [illegible]. Notwithstanding the [illegible] [illegible] with the captain of the [illegible] to express [illegible] highly [illegible] that [illegible] proven [illegible] that important [illegible] has been [illegible] [illegible] Japanese [illegible] and [illegible] believed that unless relief reaches the besieged Russians within twenty days they will be forced to surrender.

The Czar's Railroad

Washington, Nov. 17—The cost of the Czar's [illegible] around Lake Baikal over which his troops are now being hurried to the Far East [illegible] cost [illegible] ($1,700) or nearly $170,000 [illegible]. In a report just received at the state department from United States Consul Smith at Moscow the project is declared to be one of the most difficult jobs ever undertaken by Russian engineers. On the western part of the road [illegible] tunnels were cut. Smith says that beyond Irkutsk the Siberian railroad is closed to passenger [illegible] at Irkutsk. East of that town the road is used entirely for military purposes.

Black Sea Fleet

London, Nov. 17—A Vienna correspondent [illegible] reports [illegible] the condition of the Russian Black Sea fleet. The report was prepared [illegible] for use should the fleet attempt to pass through the Dardanelles. In this connection your correspondent at Constantinople wires that there will be no such attempt. The squadron he says would be unable to take a long voyage and further its equipment has been weakened to fit out the Baltic fleet for sailing.

TROLLEY CARS COME TOGETHER

MOTORMEN AND PASSENGERS ARE SERIOUSLY INJURED

One Of the Victims Will Die—Mangled Foot Found in the Wreckage—Cars Demolished—Fog Attributed To Be Cause of Collision

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 1[illegible]—As the result of a disastrous collision between two cars on the Rapid Transit Electric road this morning both motormen were seriously injured, one of whom will die, and several passengers were more or less injured.

The injured are: Motorman Bittner, both legs severed, fatal; Motorman [illegible], internal injuries; T. Woodall, passenger, one leg severed; [illegible] Slayton, [illegible] legs bruised; Walter Gardner, ankle broken.

Both cars were demolished and Motorman Bittner's legs were so badly mangled that pieces of bone were found on the track and one foot was found in the car.

Fog is attributed to be the cause of the collision.

MOST THRIFTY IN THE WORLD

AMERICAN PEOPLE ACCORDING TO REPORTS

Total Deposits in Savings Banks in the United States a Little More Than Three Billion Dollars—Other Symptoms of Prosperity

Washington, Nov. 1[illegible]—Figures confirming the generally accepted belief that the people of the United States are the most thrifty in the world are presented today by the department of commerce and labor through the bureau of statistics. According to the latest official information the total deposits in all the savings banks of the world amount to $10,[illegible],000 contributed by more than 80,000,000 persons. Of this total the United States shows aggregate deposits of a little more than $[illegible] credited to $7,[illegible] depositors.

As the figures used in arriving at the grand totals cover about one-half of the population of the world, viz, over 770,000,000, it appears that the United States with less than one and a half per cent of the total population considered contribute over [illegible] nine per cent of the total savings deposits recorded. Of the total number of deposit accounts the share of the United States is somewhat less than nine per cent while the average [illegible] per account is more than [illegible] times the average savings [illegible] [illegible] of the world.

The average individual deposit in the United States is $[illegible]. [illegible] comes next with $[illegible]. [illegible] 191, while Japan is at the foot of the list with only $[illegible] 18.

SECRETARY TAFT LEAVES TONIGHT

On Mission of Conciliation in Panama Republic.

TO BE ENTERTAINED BY NEW ORLEANS CITIZENS

The Program To Be Followed Out After Secretary's Arrival.

A SPECIAL COMMITTEE IS ALREADY APPOINTED

This Will Draw Up in Concise Form the Arguments in Behalf of the Republic's Contentions—General Davis To Be Present at Conferences—Believed Many Questions Can Be Decided Within Short Time

Washington, Nov. 17—Secretary of War Taft will leave tonight at 10 [illegible] on his mission of investigation and conciliation in the Panama republic. He will go over the Southern railroad to New Orleans where he will be entertained by the citizens and where he will make a speech about the Panama canal. On Sunday afternoon he will sail on the Dolphin for Pensacola, arriving there early Monday morning, the 21st instant. There he will transship to the cruiser Columbia which will convey him in state to Colon.

The secretary will be accompanied to Panama by Mrs. Taft and a small party composed of the following: Senor Obaldia, minister of the republic of Panama; William Nelson Cromwell, counsel of the republic and general counsel for years of the Panama Canal company; [illegible] Farnham, Mr. Cromwell's chief assistant and an expert in Panaman affairs; Admiral John [illegible] Walker, president of the isthmian canal commission; Judge Magoon, law officer of the bureau of insular affairs; Captain Cloman, U. S. A., Taft's military aide; F. W. Carpenter, Taft's private secretary; representatives of the two press associations; W. I. Johnson, an interpreter, and a messenger. Some of the party will sail to Colon on the Dolphin which will act as consort to the Columbia. A great reception has been arranged for Taft on his arrival at Colon.

All the ships in the harbor will be dressed, a salute will be fired and prominent officials will meet him on the dock which will be lined on either side with troops. A special train will convey the party to Panama where arrangements have been made for the entertainment of its members.

A formal call on Dr. Amador, president of the republic, will be made on the first day after arriving, after which Taft will take up the business end of the trip. Desiring to expedite the settlement of the questions in dispute Panama has already appointed a special committee to draw up in concise form the arguments in behalf of the republic's contentions and to present them orally for the consideration of the secretary. General Davis, governor of the canal zone, will be present at these conferences so that no time will be lost in laying the whole situation before Taft.

It is expected that the secretary will be able to decide many of the questions in dispute without referring them to Washington. Three or four days after his arrival on the isthmus an official banquet will be tendered to him at which he will make a speech outlining the future relations of the United States to the little republic. This will be an important utterance and may be made the chance to convey to the Panamans the first intimations of the secretary's decisions.

Secretary Taft goes to Panama as the personal representative of the President of the United States for the purpose of adjusting certain differences which have arisen between the government of the republic and that of the canal zone. The establishment by the United States of [illegible] the collection of United States customs duties on goods entering the zone from Panama, the establishment of postoffices by the United States within the zone and the general assumption of complete sovereignty by the United States over the canal territory are the four grievances of the Panamans.

[illegible] Secretary Taft will make a [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] of the diplomacy and [illegible] will remove the friction which has arisen. The secretary expects to remain on the isthmus over a week and hopes to be back in Washington on December 10.

KENTUCKIAN MEETS DEATH IN A PECULIAR MANNER

In an Attempt to Kill His Enemy He Loses His Own Life

Harrodsburg, Ky., Nov. 1[illegible]—Cecil Carpenter, a prominent citizen of this county, was killed in a most peculiar manner Wednesday afternoon. He had fired two shots from a revolver at [illegible] Sutherland, also a prominent farmer, but failed to hit him.

Carpenter had driven into the village [illegible] in a two horse surrey and seeing Sutherland opened fire on him from the vehicle. He missed his aim but the report of his pistol frightened his horses and they ran away, throwing him out and killing him instantly.

The trouble dates back a year when Cleveland Sutherland, a son of [illegible] Sutherland, was accused by Miss Carpenter, a daughter of the dead man. A warrant was sworn out against young Sutherland and he was arrested and brought here but on the day of trial the matter was adjusted by the young man marrying the young woman in the county jail [illegible]. Immediately after the ceremony the groom walked from the court house and left the county and has never lived with his wife.

MILLIONAIRE GEORGE GOULD SHOOTS HIS ATTENDANT

Was After Birds Near High Point When Accident Occurs

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 1[illegible]—While George Gould was shooting birds near High Point this state Wednesday he accidentally shot Edward Burns, an attendant. Several shot entered Burns' eye. A local specialist says there is small chance of saving the eye.

Mr. Gould as soon as possible had an engine attached to his private car and the wounded man was taken at high speed to Greensboro. Mrs. George Gould accompanied him, ministering to him on the way.

At Greensboro a specialist said all his wounds were superficial except that in his eye. Mr. Gould at once arranged for Burns to be taken to New York. The millionaire says no expense will be spared [illegible] Burns' sight.

DARING BOY MURDERER HOLDS OFF A POSSE

Stabs a Playmate and Then Escapes to the Mountains

Owensville, Ky., Nov. 1[illegible]—In Letcher county Sam Hall, aged fourteen, in a quarrel, it is alleged, stabbed Ed. Williams, aged thirteen, a playmate, several times, inflicting probably fatal wounds. Hall escaped to the mountains where a sheriff and posse located him after a long chase. When the boy saw the officers he opened fire upon them with a rifle and held them off until his ammunition was exhausted. He then surrendered and was placed in jail.

SCHOONER CREW SWEPT OVERBOARD

PLUCKY WOMAN GUIDES VESSEL TO THE BEACH

Saves Her Life and That of Her Twelve-Year Old Son—Villagers Turn Out Enmasse To Seek For Dead Bodies—Some Details

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 17—A despatch from St. John's, Newfoundland, says that every [illegible] and a woman at the helm the small schooner [illegible] was beached on Indian Arm on the Labrador coast Tuesday. In a terrific storm while passing through [illegible] William Maher, owner of the vessel, was washed into the sea. John Kelly in attempting to rescue him was also swept overboard and both were drowned, leaving Mrs. Maher and her twelve year old son aboard.

The woman steered the schooner [illegible] [illegible] beach there. [illegible]

When Mrs. Maher told what had happened the villagers turned out en masse and searched the shore for the bodies but without result. Kelly leaves a wife and nine children [illegible] children [illegible]. Mrs. Maher won the praise of all.

Three Japs [illegible]

Chefoo, Nov. 1[illegible]—Three Japanese torpedo boat destroyers entered the harbor this morning but left after they had satisfied themselves that the Russian [illegible] Rastoropny had been sunk.

Mr. Ware is a resident of Topeka, Kan., and as a lawyer enjoyed a large practice at the time of his appointment as pension commissioner. He was born in Hartford, Conn., in 1841.

TESTIMONY OF WEBER'S AUNT

THE ALLEGED MURDERER FEARED BY HIS PARENTS

Strikes Baby Brother, a Poor Imbecile, With His Clinched Fists—He Makes Dire Threats—The Purchase of a Pistol Damaging Evidence

Auburn, Calif., Nov. 1[illegible]—Sensational testimony was given at the adjourned session of the coroner's inquest in the Weber murder mystery last night. Not more than forty-eight hours before [illegible] at the hands of an assassin Mrs. Julius Weber, mother of Adolph, the lad accused of the shocking crimes committed Thursday, said to her sister:

"Dolphy is so mean and hateful that I am afraid of him. I am afraid he will kill all of us some day."

The morning after the mother, father, sister and brother were done to death, Adolph Weber visited the home of his aunt, Mrs. E. C. Snowden. [illegible] from a newspaper the [illegible]. Waving the paper and brandishing his fist in his aunt's face Adolph cried out that she was responsible for the accusation, then said fiercely: "You have done this and your turn will come next."

This startling testimony was given by Mrs. Snowden at the close of the evening session. She said: "Adolph was mean and hateful. His mother feared him greatly and time and again she feared that he would do something terrible. Members of the family feared him. Many times he struck his baby brother, a poor imbecile child, with his clenched fist."

For half an hour Mrs. Snowden told fact after fact, each one more damning than the last, until the culmination came in the story given above.

One more witness will be examined today. This witness is expected to give evidence connecting young Weber with the purchase of a pistol.

CONDUCTOR IS INDICTED FOR CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE

Admits Responsibility for Wreck on the Southern Railway

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 1[illegible]—W. T. Caldwell of this city, who at the time admitted his responsibility for the terrible wreck on the Southern railway near Newmarket, Tenn., occurring in September, in which sixty-two lives were lost, has been indicted by the grand jury of Jefferson county, Tennessee, for criminal negligence. Caldwell was conductor of the westbound passenger train which crashed into an eastbound train a few miles west of Newmarket. The engineer, the only other man who could have been held responsible, was burned to death [illegible] in the crash. The penalty for criminal negligence in the state is imprisonment for from two to ten years.

LOU DILLON TO TRY AGAIN

WILL BE SENT A MILE AGAINST TIME AT MEMPHIS

Trainer Will Put To Test His Own Pet Ideas and Ignore All Other Advice—Excellent Track and Weather Conditions—Horse Talk

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 17—What is regarded as the main feature [illegible] the trotting champion will be [illegible] of Lou Dillon, Billings' trotting queen. Twenty-four hours after Major Delmar's former world's record of a mile in 2:01¼, Lou Dillon is to be asked to lower her own record established [illegible] mile in 2:01. She will be sent a mile against time this afternoon. Lou Dillon came out of her race yesterday in good condition and Trainer Saunders immediately announced that he would try his own pet ideas about training the queen and sidetrack all other advice given this season.

Since Lou's illness [illegible] in the season [illegible] has been advised to go slow with the mare. He states that his idea has always been to give the trotting racing machine as much work as any horse. Lou [illegible] for work and Saunders says she can't be given too much. He says he is sending her right back today against the mark to prove or disprove that he is right in his ideas of training her. E. E. Smathers, Major Delmar's owner, who offered to donate $10,000 to charity for a repetition of Lou Dillon's 2:01 mile within a week from October 11, will again be represented at the track today by Pat Dunne, E. W. Schott and G. C. Bennett as private timers.

Weather indications point to perfect conditions and the track is in good shape.

BOSTON FISHING SCHOONER CUT DOWN BY OCEAN TUG

Man at the Wheel Caught in Wreckage and Drowned

Portland, Me., Nov. 17—The Boston fishing schooner Aldia Brigham, Captain J. O. Fulham, was cut down last night about 10:30 o'clock and a half miles southwest of Portland light by the ocean tug Walter A. Luckenbach of New York and sank at once.

John Daly of Boston was at the wheel and it is supposed he was caught in the wreckage and went down with her. The remainder of the crew [illegible] by the tug.

KING CARLOS AND QUEEN MAKE A TRIP TO LONDON

Streets Gaily Decorated in Honor of the Royal Visitors

London, Nov. 17—King Carlos and Queen Marie Amelie of Portugal made a trip to London this morning and were received in state as guests of the city corporation at a luncheon at Guildhall. The streets were decorated in honor of the royal visitors. The day was a foggy one, detracting from what might have been a brilliant occasion.

ALL A MUDDLE IN COLORADO

Center of Commercial and Financial Unrest.

SOLUTION NOT REACHED IN ELECTION CONTEST

Believed Alva Adams Has a Plurality of 10,000 Votes.

PEABODY GAINS 1,000 IN COUNTRY PRECINCTS

Each Faction Trying To Out Shout the Other in the Cry of Fraud—Hundreds of Affidavits Attesting to Illegal Voting—Up to the Supreme Court. Until a Decision Is Reached Canvassing Board To Remain Idle

Denver, Colo., Nov. 17—While Colorado is the center of a commercial and financial unrest the citizens and politicians assert the talk is all on the surface and means nothing.

Anxiety in business and official circle is intensified by the uncertainty as to who will fill the governor's chair. It is generally believed that Alva Adams, elected on the face of the returns by 10,000 votes, will be seated, but the election contest started by the Republicans in the interest of Governor Peabody is developing surprises. Peabody gained 1,000 votes Wednesday on the counting of county precincts.

Governor-elect Adams' public statement that he will stand for law and order regardless of who is affected, came in time to allay some local apprehension but it is not altogether convincing to business men. There is still the fear that Adams, elected largely by a labor vote, will be subject to the influence of united labor and this feeling admittedly is on the upward tendency.

Both factions are trying to out shout the other in the cry of election fraud. The result of the contest in this city will depend largely on the decision as to the legality of watchers appointed by the supreme court on the election commission.

The points were hotly argued Wednesday and the decision is in doubt. Both parties have hundreds of affidavits attesting illegal voting. The Republicans are said to control the supreme court on the election contest and through that body if it is decided to have jurisdiction the canvassing board. The canvassing board in Denver until a decision is reached is idle and this creates much dissatisfaction.

Meanwhile the Democrats are collecting affidavits of fraud and preparing to submit them to a special grand jury of the West Denver court which they control. Adams and Peabody are both standing pat, backed by their friends.

Governor-elect Adams said:

"It is all foolishness to think that I would take sides with labor against capital. As governor of the state I am bound by my oath to see that all interests are protected. The interests of labor and capital are identical and it is my hope that I may be able to bring them closer together. It is my duty to enforce the law as I find it and my friends will find that the same law is made for rich and poor alike. When the capitalists and the laboring men realize that there are certain elements binding them together as brothers there will be less trouble.

"I do not care to criticise the eigh*teen months of bloodshed and strife* that Colorado has undergone but I hope with the assistance of the people to bring about a better order of things.

"Matters have already improved in certain districts, especially in the Telluride district where five of the mines have been reopened with an eight hour day for the men."

Governor Peabody said that he was not bothering much over the election contest.

"It is in the interest of good government that honest elections should be conducted," he said.

F. A. Williams, chairman of the Republican city committee, said that an average of 201 votes had been disfranchised in each of the wards of the city, ten by having their names taken from the register, ten by having their names sworn by election judges and ten by having a cross placed fraudulently opposite the name of Adams.

Governor Peabody Contends Square Canvas Will Give Him a Majority.

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS SAY ADAMS MUST BE SEATED

The Opinion at Fever Heat -Camps Filling With Members of the Western Federation of Miners -Will Take Up Arms if Adams Should Ask Them -Pending Further Orders of Court Canvass To Be Discontinued

Denver Col Nov 16—The tangle over the governorship has become so serious that business interests are beginning to take alarm

Governor Peabody contends that a fair canvass of the vote will give him a majority

Alva Adams asserts that he has been fairly elected and that he will not yield

Democratic leaders say that Adams must be seated and that if this creates civil war it will be a righteous war

Governor Peabody's adherents assert that with fraud eliminated Peabody is elected and that they do not intend to be cheated out of the office With the militia at their beck and call every body admits that they are in a position to enforce their demands

Public opinion is aroused more than it has been at any time since the killing of thirteen men at the Independence depot explosion

All the mining camps in the state are filling up with members of the Western Federation of Miners and every one of them it is declared will take up arms if Adams should ask them to

Governor Peabody on the other hand has Sherman Bell and an excellently organized militia

Tuesday Senator Henry M Teller and Attorney Harvey Riddell and Samuel W Belford in the name of the Democratic party appeared before the supreme court and challenged its jurisdiction to interfere in any way with the canvass of the votes cast at last Tuesday's election

Pending further orders of the court the canvass of the vote in this city will be discontinued

CIVIL AFFAIRS IN PHILIPPINES

Report Made by Colonel Clarence R. Edwards.

RESULTS ON THE WHOLE MOST SATISFACTORY

Recommends Congress Provide for a Reduction in Tariff Rates.

CAN BE MADE WITHOUT INJURY TO HOME INDUSTRIES

Currency in Islands Entirely Changed Accounts Now Kept in New Currency Change From Silver to Gold Accomplished Without Disturbance to Business Purchase of Friar Lands Carried to Successful Issue

Washington Nov 16—The report of Colonel Clarence R Edwards chief of the bureau of insular affairs for the past year just published contains much interesting matter relative to the administration of civil affairs in the Philippines

It says that the work of establishing civil government is now practically accomplished and the results on the whole have been most satisfactory

Attention is called to the explanation that the committee recommends to congress providing for a material reduction of the present tariff rates on Philippine sugar and tobacco This reduction can be made without injury to any American industry and it is strongly urged by the secretary of war

The currency system of the islands continues the report has been entirely changed Accounts are now kept in the new currency and the change from a silver to a gold basis from a constantly fluctuating to a stable and fixed rate of exchange was accomplished without any disturbance to business and has elicited the admiration of financiers everywhere

Colonel Edwards says that the negotiations for the purchase of the friar lands has been carried to a successful issue part of the purchase price having been paid and the remainder being in hand ready to be paid Four per cent bonds were issued in order to secure funds for the purchase of these lands and were sold after advertisement at a premium that makes the net issues at about three per cent per annum The report reviews the work connected with the Philippine exhibit at the Louisiana purchase exposition at St Louis and the visit of the honorary commission of distinguished Filipinos to this country the object of both being to acquaint this country with the resources of the islands and the Filipinos with the institutions of this country

RENE BELLE IS SOLD TO REGINALD VANDERBILT

Finest Team in United States Brings a Fancy Price

According to the New York Morning Telegraph one of the most important sales of the late fall in eastern trotting circles has just been consummated Reginald C Vanderbilt buying the great show team Rene Belle and Fleet Autograph from H I Drake of Brockton Massachusetts

The team of mares is said to be the best matched in the United States

It will be remembered that Rene Belle was formerly owned by Charles H McCurdy of this city and was sent east last winter She is a daughter of Hustler Russell 2 19¼ and a dam by Montague a son of Bourbon Wilkes

The Telegraph states that the mares can trot fractions of a mile together at a sensational speed and on dress parade when out for the ribbons at the summer horse shows this season made a clean sweep

New York has had no pair like them not even in the days when the late Colonel Kipp was in the heyday of his glory showing winners at the national horse shows Mr Vanderbilt showed against the mares at the Brockton horse show two weeks ago and there saw the necessity of adding them to his show stable Mr Vanderbilt paid $7 500 for the team

TERRITORIES AND STATEHOOD.

Friends of the administration are already forecasting the program for the short session of the congress and are intimating that nothing will be considered except the regular appropriation bills necessary for the maintenance and operation of the different departments for the next fiscal year

There is rather a direct intimation that many of the measures offered at the last session and deferred until after the presidential election will be allowed to lie in their present comatose state to be renewed with the first session of the fifty ninth congress in December 1905

Congressional history shows that the short session productive of much general legislation but in this instance there would seem to be no just excuse for a further delay of action on the measure granting statehood to Oklahoma Indian territory Arizona and New Mexico There is no need of any discussion of the proposition New Mexico has been clamoring for admission for more than thirty years and has been promised it in the platforms of every national convention with the exception of this year since the days when Stephen B Elkins now senator from West Virginia represented the territory in the house Oklahoma's astonishing development in the last six years has fully established her claims to recognition and admission as a state and the claims of the other territories have been dinned into the ears of both branches of the congress until there is nothing left to be said beyond reiteration in support of the claims for statehood for the territories The fear that the party in power might suffer politically by the admission of the territories has been dissipated by the recent election returns and there is now no shadow of excuse for denying these progressive people the rights to which they are entitled

Rich in every resource necessary to make them great and prosperous the residents of these territories are suffering under handicaps due to their territorial form of government that are almost intolerable Nearly 500 000 white citizens of the Indian territory nearly all of whom are native born Americans are without schools without public roads without proper courts and deprived of the power to provide these essential to civilization and progress Their patience under the conditions has been remarkable and should be rewarded by their admission to full enjoyment of the rights granted to citizens of other states A bill granting statehood to the territories should be passed at the coming session In no other way can the congress discharge its obligation and duty to 3 000 000 enlightened progressive enterprising citizens of the republic —Washington Post

Early Tariff Revision

If there is one gift which Mr Roosevelt could fairly claim to have received from the gods it is the faculty of judging when the psychological moment the clock stroke of opportunity has arrived Let us hope that the present crisis will not find him wanting in his usual sagacity The great landslide of Tuesday has two characteristic phases It is the most enormous popular tribute to the good faith of the beneficiary ever witnessed at the polls and it carries an acute obligation with it If the voting public had simply wished to indicate that they were not disapproving of President Roosevelt's policy and methods during three years of administration it could have done so without tearing everything up by the roots by way of manifesting its satisfaction But it regarded the president as the man who had given the country the largest promise as well as the most effective performance and it wanted to encourage him past the point where there could be any misgivings in his mind with respect to the wisdom of carrying out his implied pledges

A promise of tariff revision was ingrafted into the Republican platform at Chicago largely by the president's own efforts It was not a plank of which he had any special reason to be proud in view of the awful strain to which its language was put to make it mean as little as practicable but it was the best he could get out of a convention that was controlled by the stand pat contingent of the Republican party It was regarded by his friends and sympathizers as at least something to tie to and although it has not figured extensively in the campaign it has unquestionably been in many minds one of the matters whose fate would be favorably settled by a Republican victory at the polls this November because a man of the general trustworthiness of Mr Roosevelt stood on or behind it The time has now come to make good Postponed such an undertaking is liable to fall because of the extra strength the opposition can muster and also because legislation for the federal union is a pretty big business and a score of other apparently important projects are liable to intrude themselves and result in shelving this one The time to assure the performance of something in fulfillment of the summer's promise is at once

When Major McKinley was elected president in 1896 the country drew a long and deep breath of relief at its deliverance from threatened financial disaster He was one of the few leaders in his party who remembered in that hour of grateful excitement that he was pledged also to promote a revision of the tariff not on the lines demanded now but a revision all the same In fulfillment of that obligation Representative Dingley set to work at once upon the framing of a bill for presentation to the first congress which should fall within Mr McKinley's term Before the 4th of March arrived the surviving Republican members of the ways and means committee had got their measure into pretty fair shape so that on the assembling of the special session called by the new president as soon as he was inaugurated there was no need of a day's delay in bringing it into the house

Here is Mr Roosevelt's precedent and example Let him call the Republican members of the present ways and means committee into consultation right away and arrange a campaign for the coming session the object of which shall be to reduce the duties on certain products which have been the special subjects of popular discussion A bill well digested and complete can very easily be made ready for the 4th of March next and on that day or before the president can issue his call for an extra session By the middle of May at furthest the revision can enter the statute book as the law of the land

Today not tomorrow is the time to begin —Washington Post

FOR VOTING MACHINES

The utter inability of the judges and clerks to handle expeditiously the election returns a week ago has probably done more to create a sentiment for the use of voting machines in Marion county than years of theorizing could have accomplished. It clearly demonstrated that the Australian method is too cumbersome, too slow, too bungling.

It will be remembered that it was well on toward midnight before the first returns from the county were in and far past the midnight hour when enough precincts had reported to make computation possible. The board remained in session until daylight and yet the count in several precincts was in progress. Hours passed and still the count went on. It was not until [illegible] when the last precinct concluded its work.

As a result the members of the election board were thoroughly tired out. They made an attempt to canvass the returns Wednesday morning, but were utterly out of shape for the work and went home to seek their beds and sleep.

The consequences were that the people of Marion county could not get the official returns Wednesday evening in their papers. In fact, the official count was not complete in time for the papers of the day following and one paper made no pretention of giving anything like a summary until Friday. So much for the old method.

With voting machines the long and often bungling count would have been eliminated. Instead of waiting until Thursday or Friday for returns they would have been at hand from every precinct of the county early Tuesday night.

Best of all the first figures given out would have been final—the official figures. There would not have been any void or defective ballot. That would mean the elimination of all contests and the recanvassing of the vote.

Voting machines cost money, but in the light of the experiences of last week they are surely worth the cost.

If Colonel Bryan is to have charge of the reorganizing of the Democracy it's probable that Judge Parker won't get much more than a seat in the last pew of the balcony.

In case Judge Parker should follow Colonel Bryan's lead we presume he will call his weekly the Telegram.

Wouldn't it be awful now that the vice-presidential hoodoo is broken should Mr. Fairbanks dispute Mr. Root's right to the presidential nomination in 1908?

Can you tell off hand the name of the Cuban general whose life was taken by treachery? Can you tell who was the lion hearted Boer whose death marked the beginning of the end of the South African struggle? Can you even tell the name of the courageous Russian admiral who went down with his flagship at Port Arthur? What then is fame?

Esopus, the Chicago News facetiously remarks, is no longer a spot of the first magnitude.

Now it's up to us to dodge the pneumonia germ.

Apostle John Dowie says Colonel Bryan has a brass mouth and is always talking. Even the cultists, it appears, are not free from professional jealousy.

And talking about [illegible] most any of us would probably know enough to get in and out of [illegible] if we lived to be 60 years old.

If this thing keeps up Illinois and Ohio will have something to say to Pennsylvania's claim to being the Gibraltar of Republicanism.

It would be easy to tell which was the stronger if we only knew whether it was the silverite or the gold Democracy which cast its vote to Roosevelt.

Probably Judge Parker assumes that the verdict of the people has sufficiently cleared the president of the charge of blackmail, making it unnecessary for him to withdraw the charge.

Mr. Hill will probably retire just as soon as he finds where he is at.

ELEVEN THOUSAND SAVED

The rejection of the Blaine avenue ditch contract by the county commissioners has brought the city an eye opener and a very gratifying saving of nearly $11,000. The thing is worth knowing about. The Blaine avenue ditch is another child of the system of county ditching by the county commissioners for the city. This project coming up, the city engineer estimated its cost at less than $1[illegible]. When the sale of the contract came up there were [illegible] bids [illegible] contract [illegible] than $[illegible]. [illegible] was more than the board [illegible]. Then city officials [illegible] by surprise. Councilman [illegible] Phillips set an investigation on foot. Clerk [illegible] joined in looking matters up and they found that County Surveyor Noyes had advertised only by postal cards, a method inadequate and illegal. Mr. Phillips enlisted the efforts of all members of the council and these officers were heard by the commissioners. The protest bore fruit. The contract was not closed and a re-letting with legal and efficient advertising was won. The result is a contract at a saving of nearly eleven thousand dollars.

It is a handsome saving. At the same time it is an astonishing revelation of the methods of County Surveyor Noyes and the old board of commissioners. We are sure the taxpayer will be grateful to Councilman Phillips and his fellow members for upsetting the job and will feel kindly to the commissioners for yielding gracefully to the protest, though there is ill temper that such a proceeding ever came near being carried to completion.

A shocking disregard of public duty permitted the first deal and it is pretty sure that only the protest of [illegible] in proceeding legally exerted led to a reopening of the matter.

Marion ditches have become a burden in taxation. It is hard enough to pay for them when they are economically constructed. But to have paid $28,000 and more for what is now to be done for $17,000 would have created a storm.

It is pleasing to think that the public interests have been protected and the saving made. It is good to think too that the incident has taught a lesson that will bear good results in the future.

The Star prints today an interesting communication, a tribute by the Washington Post, an independent Democratic paper, to Theodore Roosevelt. It will be found well worth reading.

According to the goose bone prophet of Reading, Pennsylvania, this winter is to be even more severe than last. Here's hoping that Mr. Hartz has lost his prophetic cunning.

The old story that the Democratic party is the party of the masses will have to be laid on the shelf.

Marion county has apparently reached that happy stage where neither official nor a party can use his office to partisan ends without being called to account at the polls.

And among those who are quietly congratulating themselves may be named the county Democrats who failed to land nominations.

It will be impossible apparently to give the list of [illegible] pluralities without first taking a census of the state.

Maybe there is something in Mr. Bryan's claim that Democracy is not in need of reorganization. [illegible] greater need of a mental [illegible].

And the following [illegible] novel.

In the light of the announcement that Kuroki was killed by a Russian shell and had [illegible] it's nothing short of an outrage on the part of the correspondent to drag him out of the grave to fight four battles since.

Now let's go to work and [illegible] that canal.

All Massachusetts [illegible] governor [illegible] the Washington [illegible] governorship.

There is a rumor that [illegible] Davis is one [illegible] his [illegible]

It wouldn't be [illegible] should [illegible] Mr. [illegible] popularize the [illegible] style of campaign. [illegible] given an [illegible] the [illegible] Roosevelt [illegible]

In the [illegible] in which [illegible] the campaign [illegible] that maybe [illegible] rapher is [illegible] things. [illegible] tered the hall of [illegible] campaign manager.

In the language of our great and good friend Mr. Cleveland the vice-presidential hoodoo has been knocked into innocuous desuetude.

Having had time to give the matter study, Mr. Roosevelt, we agree with your implied thought that there was some difference between Messrs. Cortelyou and Taggart and [illegible] also in the results of their labors.

And among the other happy features of the county election the good effect it will probably have on present and future county officers is not the least. It has been clearly shown that there are conditions which [illegible] of policy [illegible]

It is hardly probable that Miss [illegible] will [illegible] with the whirlwind campaign.

The remarkable election of Douglas, the shoe man who was elected governor of Massachusetts by 20,000 plurality while the remainder of the ticket went [illegible]000 Republican, demonstrates the value of advertising. Both the name and the face of the shoe man were as familiar to the citizens of the Bay state as their own. The name Douglas is almost a household word throughout the land. The result in Massachusetts is [illegible] other [illegible] proofs that advertising pays.

A Seneca county farmer picked 100 bushels of apples off one tree. That's the kind of [illegible] which help[illegible] the land tide.

It will be the pleasure of the recently elected Republican candidates to show the citizens of Marion county the difference between public officers and party officers. There's a world of difference and it's not impossible that Marion county citizenship will conclude that it wants still more of the former kind.

It's not at all improbable that President Roosevelt knew what was coming when he indited that proclamation of Thanksgiving.

It's a wonder some Democratic [illegible] hasn't set up the claim that no man should be compelled to give up his money without having at least a show in the game.

Mayor Harrison remarks that the Democratic party must stand for something. For a number of years it has been standing for defeat.

Tom Watson insists that Democracy is badly in need of the service of an undertaker.

War to the end, says Count Cassini. But the count doesn't specify whether he means the end of Japan or the finish of Russia.

If Mr. Thomas Jefferson's bones haven't been doing acrobatic turns of late it's only because they have not heard Mr. Thomas Watson's declaration that he stands for Jeffersonism.

Bryan insists that Democracy must stand by the common people, but the unfortunate part of the matter for Democrats appears to be that the common people won't stand by it.

JAMES P. REED DIES IN UTAH

Is a Sufferer of Tuberculosis for a Number of Years.

ON HIS WAY HOME WHEN LAST SUMMONS COMES

Leaves Marion in 1897 Going to Colorado Springs Where He Has Since Resided. Remains Were Brought to This City for Interment. Funeral Occurred Friday

A telegram from Salt Lake, Utah, [illegible] Tuesday morning [illegible] the unexpected death of James P. Reed, the only son of the [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. James H. Reed, at that point Sunday.

The immediate cause of Mr. Reed's death was a hemorrhage, although he [illegible] been a sufferer of tuberculosis for a number of years. He has been in California for some time and was returning to his home in Colorado [illegible] at the time of his death. While in California his condition seemed to [illegible] much improved and his friends were [illegible] encouraged.

The deceased was about thirty two years of age and left the city in 1897 [illegible] to Colorado Springs where he [illegible] since made his residence, paying only the briefest of visits to his friends and relatives here.

At the time Mr. Reed was taken [illegible] the illness which resulted in his death he was employed as a teller in the Marion County bank, an institution in which he was a heavy stockholder. Although compelled to remain in the West by his ill health he had continued to hold the position named and his interests were wholly centered in this city.

The deceased was a member of all of the York rite Masonic bodies in this city, a member of Marion Lodge No. [illegible] B. P. O. E. and was a charter member of the [illegible] Club.

During his residence in this city he was held in the highest regard by a host of friends and the announcement of his death is received with keen regret.

Mr. Reed's funeral occurred Friday afternoon at St. Paul's church and the remains were interred in Marion cemetery.

WILLIAM WAGNER PREPARES FOR THE DEATH SUMMONS

Purchases Cemetery Lot and Makes All Other Arrangements

William Wagner was found dead in bed this morning in his room in the Emmanuel Fisler boarding house on north Sandusky avenue.

For some time Mr. Wagner had been complaining of heart trouble and stated to his friends that some morning they would find him dead. This morning when Mr. Fisler went to call him he found the door locked and upon opening it with a pass key found the occupant dead.

Last September Mr. Wagner bought a lot in the cemetery, paying for it, also the amount of money necessary [illegible] the grave. He also called on Mr. Keel, paying to [illegible] A couple of weeks ago he went to Herman Muller and gave him $40 and later [illegible] more for his funeral expense.

A couple of years ago he had some domestic trouble with his wife and family, now residing on a farm near New Washington, and there was [illegible] but the matter never came into court.

Mr. Wagner was one of those honest German people, willing to work, and had many friends in and around town. Coroner [illegible] over on No. 9 Friday and is holding an inquest.—Bucyrus Telegraph November 1.

THANKSGIVING HYMN

By NEIL MACDONALD

①

Through all the changes of the year,
The summer bright, the winter drear,
The hopes of spring and autumn's dower,
We recognize God's love and power,
And thank Him that with lavish hand
He pours such blessings on our land.

②

We thank Him that the fruitful soil
Has well rewarded honest toil,
That labor has its meed of wage,
That right and justice rule the age,
And as the circling years pass on
We near the goal which will be won.

③

For all the blessings of this life,
For peace and plenty free from strife,
For hope and freedom's cheering ray,
We thank the Giver on this day,
And pray that He may ever be
Our guide and guard on land and sea.

④

And, oh, may He who rules the year
Lead us aright and in his fear;
And as He's favored us may we
Be kind to those that needy be.
For we best show our thankfulness
By prompt relieving of distress.

CURIOUS CHINESE TEMPLE

Temples to the god Kwang are scattered thickly all over the Celestial empire. Among the various degrees of greater and lesser divinities that appeal to the religious instincts of the Chinese Kwang seems to be a prime favorite. THE FASTEST FIRE ENGINE IN THE WORLD.

The picture illustrates a new fire engine recently ordered by the city of Leicester, England. It is the most speedy machine of the kind ever constructed and [illegible] thirty-five miles an hour. It is designed as a first aid engine and it is fitted with a petrol motor so that it may be started instantly. The body, which weighs about a ton, is made to carry with safety a load of [illegible]000 pounds. All the mechanism is protected from dirt by a shield underneath. Two nine-foot ladders are carried on a bracket and the step at the rear accommodates two fire and chemical cylinders.

ANOTHER ORIGINAL AFRICAN EXPLORER.

Dr. Samuel Phillips Verner, president of the Stillman Institute of Tuscaloosa, Ala., has made a series of valuable contributions to the world's present knowledge concerning those mysterious regions first exploited by the intrepid Stanley. His most recent achievement in this direction was the transplantation from the great unexplored heart of the dark continent to the St. Louis exposition [illegible] of pygmies whose very existence [illegible] been questioned. Although Du Chaillu described these Lilliputian dwellers of the African interior his account was not taken seriously by scientists and Stanley's assertion that they really existed was received in polite silence. Dr. Verner, however, has put an end to all future skepticism by affording an ocular demonstration of the pygmies' reality.

LOVE AND THANKSGIVING

By Callie Bonney Marbie

They may talk of old fashioned Thanksgiving,
With pumpkins and apples galore,
And a room festooned with dried apples
And doughnuts a bushel or more,
Of the fat roasted chickens and turkeys,
Of the cider by courtesy "sweet,"
Of the huge country pies, cakes and puddings
And other things equally neat.

But give me a fashionable dinner,
With a dear little girl tete-a-tete,
Who listens, with fond eyes responding,
To the story of love I relate.
Thanksgiving! Ah, yes, mid the laughter,
The feast and the flowers and wine,
A man's grateful thanks, love and homage,
For the dear little girl who is mine.

Present Status of Panama Interoceanic Canal

APROPOS of the mission intrusted to Secretary of War Taft to visit Panama as the accredited agent of the government for the purpose of investigating the differences which have arisen in regard to certain provisions of the canal treaty it is pertinent to recall some of the leading features of that widely discussed enterprise Notwithstanding the fact that intimations from various sources have come recently to the Washington authorities that the Panamans were contemplating a revolution the rumors have failed to produce a panic in official circles When it is remembered that revolutions so called have been the constant and most diverting occupation of the Central and South American peoples almost from time immemorial it is not to be wondered at that a fresh threat is looked upon as being somewhat innocuous

Be this as it may the construction of the great interoceanic waterway is not likely to begin until everything essential to its successful development has been made ready so perfected indeed that all possibility of hindrance of any sort shall be provided against This is indicated with sufficient clearness by a recent statement of Chief Engineer Wallace of the canal commission to the effect that the present commission had not yet adopted the plans of the former commission and that it will probably require another year of investigation to determine fully the details of the various plans under consideration ranging from a ninety foot level to a sea level canal with a tidal lock near the Pacific

If a sea level canal should be decided upon a dam would be necessary to control the Chagres river and this plan would also require the building of a tunnel seven miles in length to carry the surplus water of the river from the lake formed by this dam on to the Pacific Consideration is also being given to a plan for reducing the summit level from ninety to sixty feet by substituting another water supply of equal area but lower elevation for the present Bohio lake

Several engineering parties are now in the field for the purpose of obtaining the necessary data for estimates as to the cost of construction and during the coming winter many experiments will be made with various kinds of steam shovels and other heavy machinery required in the preliminary construction Of course the principal work must be done by machinery and physical labor must be reduced to a minimum The ghastly record of the previous attempts to construct the canal makes that imperative It is not expected that more than 10 000 or 12 000 men will be employed at any one time Now there are not more than 1 00 men at work in all branches of the enterprise Of this number 500 are in the sanitary department There are six divisions of engineer corps at work each in charge of a resident engineer

The engineering and clerical departments are almost exclusively conducted by Americans and every steamer supplies additions from the United States The majority of laborers and also a few of the skilled men are English speaking negroes from Jamaica Recent visitors to the isthmus declare that Panama's evil reputation as an insanitary region is due very largely to the fact that the indolent population has paid absolutely no heed to the laws of health Physical excesses are perilous in all tropical countries but most of the men who now hold responsible positions in connection with the canal are sober industrious and ambitious Many of them are alumni of American colleges They are not put to any especial hardship on account of the climate and cases of sickness among them are comparatively few

It will be a surprise to those who have been accustomed to regard Panama as one of the most torrid spots on the continent to learn that the mean temperature for the past summer was only 84 degrees Some of the officials connected with the canal declare that they have never experienced a more agreeable summer in the United States The efficient sanitary corps has paid special attention to eradicating yellow fever and malarial disorders and the results have been encouraging There were only two cases of yellow jack during the entire summer and but one of the victims was an employee of the government The death rate in the city of Panama during the summer was fifty four to the thousand Still the most optimistic admirer of the isthmus would hardly pronounce it a paradise or recommend it as a health resort Its present improved sanitary condition however is an achievement worthy of much commendation and may be taken as an earnest that the commission means to be vigilant in its crusade against the apathy which formerly existed

The construction of the canal giant enterprise that it is is not the only problem facing the United States Its building presupposes and necessitates many other works some of them of noteworthy magnitude One of them is the providing of an adequate harbor at Colon This it is estimated will cost at least $6 000 000 The harbor at Panama will require much improvement and it will involve a large expenditure Another improvement contemplates the utilization of the water supply developed at the great canal to furnish lighting power both for the canal and also for the terminals and towns along the route

One of the most important improvements must be a proper water supply for both Colon and Panama The construction of waterworks for the city of Panama has already begun and $100 000 will be expended A sewerage system which will cost as much more will follow and then will come the repaving of the streets of Panama now in a condition of practical impassability Colon also will be put into a state of habitability so that the lives of the workmen who will build that end of the canal shall not be imperiled

From this showing it is apparent that the actual work of construction is likely to be considerably delayed It is the present opinion of the engineers in charge of the excavation that the work will not be ready for them before the beginning of 1906 By that time it is expected that the route will be mapped out and everything made ready for digging It will take at least eight years to complete the undertaking It is believed that the line already marked out by the French engineers will be followed as closely as possible the principal changes being the straightening of curves The canal will run for about twenty five miles along the Chagres river then along one of the branches of the Chagres passing through the Culebra cut ten miles from Panama thence on by the Rio Grande river to Panama bay

It is now estimated that the completion of the work will cost at least $150 000 000 This amount added to the $40 000 000 paid to the French company for the canal property and the $10 000 000 given to the Panama government for the land grant will make the total cost $200 000 000 There is little doubt that the canal will be a profitable investment from a business point of view

AMOS CURTIS

BATHING IN A SACK

A good many people are apt to have business which calls them into small towns and places where the bath is an almost unknown article In this extremity there is a novel arrangement invented by an Austrian which is a sack shaped bath This tub can be made of rubber or any other flexible waterproof material and when collapsed can be folded small enough for storage in a trunk or portmanteau

To put it into use it is opened and spread out on the floor and the water is poured in Then the bather steps into the center pulls up the sack and closes its mouth around his neck By stooping and assuming various postures he is enabled to bathe all parts of his body and if he so desires having drained off the first water the sack can be refilled to a point which will enable the bather by assuming a stooping posture suddenly to secure a thorough rinsing by the rise and fall of the water The device might also be used by camping parties and for household use where the luxuries of a permanent bath are unknown

Notable Progress In Development of Airships

THE science of aeronautics seems to be almost ready to emerge from the shadowy realm of theory and to take on the exactness which is the crowning glory of all the practical arts Recent tests made at St Louis under the auspices of the committee of transportation exhibits at the Louisiana Purchase exposition show that the development of dirigible flying machines has received a decided impetus in the last few months This is due in part to the liberal inducements offered by the fair managers but the spirit of competitive enterprise is also responsible for the growing activity among experimenters in aerial navigation

The wonderful performances of the airship built under the supervision of the veteran aeronaut Captain Thomas S Baldwin of San Francisco known as the manufacturer of more balloons than any other person who ever lived has brought America into first place among those countries which are trying to penetrate the secret of air navigation This astonishing piece of mechanism named by its builder the California Arrow seems to be as obedient to the directing hand of its operator as any of the modern propelling motors It not only repeats the aerial exploits of Santos Dumont's most successful machine but it has demonstrated the fact that it is vastly more dirigible and not so subject to embarrassing eccentricities It does not detract from the favorable impression it has made upon experts and upon the general public as well that the California Arrow came to its test with slight public exploitation and that its prudent builder was chary of his claims of what the machine would accomplish It was known in the aeronautic world that Captain Baldwin was building an airship but he had been in the business for so many years that no one even suspected that he was going to eclipse all of his previous efforts

In one of the tests as an instance of the positive dirigibility of the California Arrow and in the face of a wind blowing from the northwest at the rate of ten miles an hour the vessel sailed back and forth at a height of 300 feet rose upward and returned several times to the starting point At the last test just as the airship had described its circuit for the second time a gigantic [illegible] the spark of the gasoline engine was raised a little too high and the mechanism ceased to work In any other airship ever invented this would have been disastrous but the California Arrow was supplied with remedies for the accident Her shrewd inventor had looked out for that Although the propelling apparatus could no longer be used and the vessel was adrift on the wind the aeronaut was still able simply by the shifting of his own weight and the manipulation of the rudder and the ballast to turn the craft raise and lower it in the air and to control to a considerable extent the direction of the movements The operator showed not the least concern but deliberately selected a convenient landing and descended leisurely to the ground without the slightest injury either to himself or to the machine

Now that the test has proved satisfactory Captain Baldwin confesses that the California Arrow is the product of over thirty years study and experimentation It has a cigar shaped gas bag of varnished Japanese silk fifty two feet in length and seventeen in diameter with a capacity of 8 000 cubic feet On the upper surface and at the ends the silk is doubled and at the points of greatest strain trebled The car forty feet in length is a light framework of white cedar braced with piano wire It is in section a perfect equilateral triangle so that the whole is in the shape of a right prism save that it grows smaller and smaller toward the ends This car is drawn through the air by a two bladed silk propeller eleven feet from tip to tip set at an angle of twenty degrees at the front end of the car

The engine weighs only sixty six pounds but performs 500 revolutions a minute and has a working capacity of seven horsepower The propeller itself makes 200 revolutions a minute and the draft of air serves to prevent the Hercules gasoline engine from exploding The engine is set about eight feet from the forward end of the car The aeronaut has a seat and conning platform about twelve feet back of the engine and he can move about the car at will although a change of position of less than two feet is sufficient to cause the craft to ascend or descend by lowering the beak The total weight of the entire apparatus is only 220 pounds The maximum speed thus far attained by its own engine not taking the wind into consideration is twelve miles an hour

It must be borne in mind that the California Arrow is little more than a small and rather superficially constructed working model With a well made engine and a thoroughly up to date carburetor such as Captain Baldwin is now using on an airship under construction at Los Angeles Cal even greater wonders may be accomplished One of the chief drawbacks to aerial navigation has been the difficulty of securing competent workmen and the necessity of putting up with relatively crude and unreliable mechanical instruments

Another promising airship of American construction is the invention of T C Benbow of Butte Mont It is constructed on an entirely different principle from the Baldwin flier and many of its features are exceedingly ingenious It is much larger than the California Arrow the cigar shaped bag being seventy four feet in length and nearly twenty two in breadth It has a capacity of 14 000 cubic feet and can carry a load of 1 000 pounds Directly underneath the center of the gas bag and attached to its cords is a horizontal spar about two thirds as long as itself made of steel with the exception of a short prolongation of bamboo aft to which the rudder post is affixed From this rod is suspended the car proper which is a framework of aluminum sustained by steel rods and further strengthened with braces of piano wire

The car is divided into two compartments the forward one containing a ten horsepower Hercules gasoline engine and the other the rectangular wicker basket in which the aeronaut stands The gasoline tank is in front of the basket and is connected with the carburetor and engine by means of pipes running under the basket The engine is kept cool by an ordinary electric fan attached in front of it The propelling apparatus is geared to the engine by a broad leather belt and consists of two wheels one on each side of the car and at the exact center of gravity of the entire apparatus These wheels are twelve feet in diameter and make eighty revolutions a minute Each wheel is composed of four six foot blades or wings made of canvas stretched on bicycle tubing with piano wire braces These wings are collapsible and by an ingenious mechanical device are made to close up at each revolution remaining open just long enough to grasp the air and presenting a minimum of resistance while returning to the point of greatest efficiency This excellent application to aerial navigation of the principle governing the motions of the human hands in swimming and the change of position of the vanes on the feathers of birds during flight is looked upon by air navigation experts as of great and unquestionable value By using a crank placed conveniently within reach of the navigator the operation of the wings may be modified so as to cause the craft to ascend or descend at will

The working out of the plans for this airship was begun twelve years ago while Mr Benbow was leading the life of a rancher on the Montana plains but its actual construction was not begun until May of last year The device is suggestive of great possibilities

WHOLESOME ADVICE

If love is to flourish between two people they must each be slow to take offense and not only willing but glad to pardon at the first and faintest sign of penitence still more to overlook entirely the sin which has been a blunder and an accident Life and love are in great part the art of bearing with other people's short comings

Every offender whatever the offense is in the eye of the law entitled to a fair trial and no one should be condemned unheard The exercise of a modicum of common sense and justice would nip most quarrels whether between lovers or others in the bud Some one has wisely said that scarcely a novel was ever written which could have run to the end if the hero and heroine had been fully frank with one another Most dissensions are founded upon misunderstandings

Much may be forgiven to those who love much by those who return such affection Nor is it sufficient to forgive without forgetting the offense The slate should be wiped clean and the transgression be as though it had never been

WHEN VICTORIA WAS REBUKED

Lady Henry Somerset the well known temperance enthusiast is probably the only person living who ever administered a rebuke to Queen Victoria It was more than forty years ago when Lady Isabel Somers Cocks as she then was was a tiny maiden of about seven summers with an adequate idea of her own importance in the scale of creation The queen one day seeing the little lady sitting demurely alone walked toward her and patting her cheek said And so you are little Isabel This was familiarity which the daughter of an earl could not brook so tossing her pretty little head she answered loftily I am Lady Isabel if you please

ACCIDENTS REPORTED FROM MANY LOCALITIES

A Second Storm Fast Traveling up the Atlantic Coast.

WASHINGTON SNOWBOUND FOR SEVERAL HOURS

Steamer Goes Ashore at Rockland [illegible] Reported Missing, Storms on [illegible] Lakes, Tug Goes to the Bottom [illegible] Captain Drowned - Remainder of Crew Rescued by Life Savers. City [illegible] Rough Experience

New York, Nov. 11—Not since 1887 [illegible] communication between New York [illegible] the balance of the country been in [illegible] condition of collapse as that [illegible] exists today. Barring the operation of a few telephone wires to Baltimore and Philadelphia the wire service was completely knocked out by [illegible] terrific storm.

[illegible] damage to wires is the most serious [illegible] the telegraph companies [illegible] in many years. It spread [illegible] wide area and caused a great [illegible] out repair gangs who were [illegible] started in the night by special trains over all the railroad lines [illegible] and south. Little could be [illegible] however until daylight [illegible] were found to be down [illegible] north, west and east of Albany and north of Poughkeepsie on [illegible] New York Central. There was only one wire working on this route [illegible] extended only to Poughkeepsie.

[illegible] the Erie line 100 poles were [illegible] down near Port Jervis, N. Y. [illegible] were left north of Baltimore [illegible] between Philadelphia and Harrisburg. Much trouble was south of [illegible] where the storm first [illegible]. Owing to the width of the [illegible] path much delay to railway [illegible] anticipated as the telegraph [illegible] controls the movements of [illegible].

[illegible] the storm was at its height [illegible] one of the most desperate [illegible] at rescue ever seen in New [illegible] took place. Eleven men [illegible] were passengers on the wrecked [illegible] Port Morris were taken off [illegible] steam launch manned by a [illegible] crew of harbor police.

[illegible] Port Morris left 99th street for [illegible] Point at [illegible] o'clock with [illegible] passengers and four large [illegible] and their driver. The wind [illegible] a hurricane across Bowery bay [illegible] the waves were lashed half way [illegible] top of the craft by the fury of [illegible].

[illegible] vessel was proceeding slowly [illegible] its way through the tortuous [illegible] but the snow blinded the pilot [illegible] out familiar lights so that [illegible] short distance from College [illegible] the Port Morris struck a ledge [illegible] sea forced the vessel into [illegible] trap and she soon settled in [illegible] position.

[illegible] of distress from the steamer [illegible] by the health department [illegible] which [illegible] many attempts to stand by. The [illegible] and darkness rendered this [illegible] that the [illegible] on returned to [illegible] and sent word to the police [illegible] a much smaller vessel [illegible] made five ineffectual at[illegible] to reach the Port Morris and [illegible] escaped going on the ledge [illegible] time.

[illegible] to succor the storm bound [illegible] the Patrol steamed to New York [illegible] for volunteers to man a lifeboat. [illegible] men responded and in the [illegible] the biting gale the boat started [illegible] out. Before the life savers [illegible] the Port Morris a small [illegible] launch sent out by the captain [illegible] to get under the lee [illegible] and after extreme difficulty [illegible] were subjected to [illegible] the eleven passengers were [illegible] into the launch. The four [illegible] drivers refused to desert their [illegible].

[illegible] much attempted to land [illegible] but with its gunwale [illegible] close and the waves sweeping the little craft this was [illegible] and after much labor the passengers were transferred to the Patrol [illegible] landed them at [illegible] the captain of the Patrol said [illegible] was one of the worst he had [illegible] on East river.

[illegible] Collins in command of the Port Morris was taken [illegible] with the [illegible] who [illegible] and [illegible] in Manhattan. The [illegible] the terrible [illegible] remained [illegible] the Port Morris [illegible] [illegible] pulled [illegible].

[illegible] from [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] in Sandy [illegible] storm. They were [illegible] [illegible] visitors [illegible].

In the face of the [illegible] started [illegible] to the shore but their boat was caught in the high seas [illegible] swept them out of sight. Watchers along the shore saw them [illegible] repeatedly to gain shelter [illegible] success and it is thought they were swept into Long Island Sound.

East of Pittsburg

Chicago, Nov. 11—With [illegible] east of Pittsburg being stormbound early today there was no communication between Chicago and New York exchanges. LaSalle street therefore was left to its own initiative.

This made the local board unusually active at the opening.

The board of trade usual foreign cables were missing and traders were completely in the dark as to what developments had taken place in the market abroad.

On the Lakes

Cleveland, Nov. 11—After one of the heaviest storms in the history of the lower lake regions the wind has finally subsided this morning that the several transportation, telegraph and telephone companies were able to take stock and estimate the amount of damage. So far as can be learned up to the present but one life was lost, that of Captain Bell Munney of the tug Gregory which foundered off this city.

The big steamer City of Buffalo was badly shattered by the gale but managed to reach port in fair shape with a large number of badly frightened passengers on board.

A number of other lake steamers had a bad time of it during the night but reached a safe anchorage this morning.

Thousands of telegraph and telephone wires were lost during the night and this morning New York city and the east are entirely cut off.

The wind was accompanied by a wet snow which caused [illegible] railways and delayed train for hours.

In Eastern Cities

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 11—A snow, wind and rain storm caused an almost complete prostration of electric, telegraph, telephone and [illegible] service. A number of [illegible] were forced by the heavy [illegible] but so far as known there [illegible] no fatalities. With the exception of [illegible] Western Union wires to Philadelphia and New York Baltimore is cut off from communication with the other points of the country. The weather observer sent out a warning to masters of vessels [illegible] that a second storm is [illegible] traveling up the Atlantic coast.

Washington Snowbound

Washington, Nov. 11—As the result of a snow storm Washington [illegible] several hours was [illegible] of telegraphic and telephone communication with the outside world. Both the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph companies report [illegible] of their wires and [illegible] to get into [illegible]. [illegible] at the railways [illegible] the fact that [illegible] schedule time but the [illegible] trains were [illegible] or more hours [illegible].

Crew Missing

[illegible] Nov. 11—The two masted [illegible] of Rockland [illegible] ashore in a severe northeast gale about the [illegible] Lupulin Cove on the [illegible]. Harlan Dissents Still

Justice Harlan according to a story told by a Philadelphia lawyer has a queer humor of his own. He is a member of the faculty of the Columbia law school and a night or two ago was talking at the school with Judge Peele of the District Court of Claims.

"I wish, Mr. Justice," said Judge Peele, "that you would have your clerk send me copies of some of the [illegible] decisions of the supreme court."

"All right, Judge," Harlan replied. Then he asked blandly: "Do you want the cases in which I rendered dissenting opinions?"

"I assume some of the cases come under that head," said Judge Peele. "You frequently do dissent, you know."

"I shall not send them," snorted Justice Harlan. "I shall not be responsible for the dissemination of such law as appears in the majority opinions to which I have dissented."—Philadelphia Press.

GOOD-WILL MESSAGE FROM THE EMPEROR

Makes Formal Address to Chief Executive in His Native Tongue.

REFERS TO THE DAYS OF COMMODORE PERRY

The Event That United the Great Republic of the West With the Empire of the East. The President's Reply. Best Wishes for Emperor's Health and the Prosperity of the Japanese People.

Washington, Nov. [illegible]—With all the [illegible] due [illegible] Prince [illegible] of the Japanese imperial house of Fushimi known as the hero of Nashan hill, whose visit to the United States at this time has set the diplomats of Europe [illegible], was formally received by the president at the White House this morning. The ceremony took place in the East room at 10 o'clock. The distinguished visitor delivered to the president a personal message of good will from the emperor of Japan, his half brother.

The prince arrived at the White House shortly before 10 o'clock. He was attired in the full uniform of a general in the Japanese army. The introductions having been made the prince proceeded with his formal address to the president, speaking in Japanese, his remarks being interpreted by one of the attaches of the legation. After the president['s] reply the two talked informally for several minutes on general topics.

The Prince's Address

Prince [illegible] in addressing the president spoke as follows:

"Mr. President: It is hardly necessary for me to tell you how the imperial government and people of Japan with an earnest desire to contribute their [illegible] share of effort to the success of a noble enterprise of a friendly nation heartily responded to the invitation of your government to participate in the Louisiana Purchase exposition at St. Louis, but it affords me pleasure to inform you, Mr. President, that his majesty the emperor was pleased to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to your country for the purpose of personally [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] world so [illegible] [illegible] at St. Louis [illegible] that [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Commodore [illegible] [illegible] republic of the West with the empire of the legendary East and which has contributed [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] progress [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] President [illegible] [illegible] the sentiments of [illegible] [illegible] that [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] majesty [illegible] subjects."

The President's Reply

The president replied as follows:

"It gives me unfeigned pleasure to meet your imperial highness and to hear from you the expression of the friendly sentiments [illegible] the emperor and of the people of Japan toward the United States of America [illegible] that the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] friendly [illegible] American people.

ANDRE RESIGNS

Paris, Nov. 1[illegible]—General Andre, minister of war, handed his resignation to President Loubet today. No reason for this was given to the public but it is obvious that the recent scene in the chamber when Andre had his face slapped by Deputy Syveton during an exciting debate over war department and Dreyfus scandals was the cause.

When Hart Hook who resides on the Dr. G. T. Harding farm north of town went to haul some corn Monday morning he discovered that a big two horse sled had been stolen. The sled belonged to Dr. Harding.

2,500 HOGS ARE ROASTED ALIVE

FIRE BREAKS OUT IN UNITED STOCK YARDS

Cattle Stampede Breaking Through Immense Pen Enclosures—Are Surrounded by an Army of Men and Are Driven to a Place of Safety

New York, Nov. 17—Fire in the United Stock Yards at the foot of Sixth street, Jersey City, early today burned to death 2,500 hogs, roasted 200 cattle, [illegible] stored ready for shipment, caused [illegible] 000 head of cattle, sheep and hogs to stampede, breaking through the immense pen enclosures and destroyed much valuable property. For a time the water front along the Jersey City shore for blocks was threatened with destruction.

The fire started in the cold storage room and is thought to be due to the explosion of an ammonia tank. The flames [illegible] the second floor of a building that covered two or more [illegible]. In the room were the carcasses ready for shipment and directly under it were penned in the 2,500 live hogs which were to have been slaughtered today.

In the hour at the time the explosion occurred were said to be three men employed as watchmen. The men have not been seen and the police [illegible] they were killed. At the first smell of smoke the cattle became frantic and when the blaze shot high up in the air they began stampeding [illegible] pens. The hogs also stampeded [illegible] [illegible] on top of the other. [illegible] maddened animals [illegible] through the water [illegible]. With clubs and [illegible] about 60 men surrounded the cattle, sheep and hogs and drove them to enclosures from which they could not break.

The loss is estimated at $10,000. [illegible] the three watchmen were found to be [illegible].

EXTRA SESSION MAY BE CALLED

Congressman Babcock Favors Revision of Tariff Schedules.

NORTHWESTERN STATES DEMAND SOME ACTION

Predicts President Will Call Congress Together After March 4.

MANY SCHEDULES SO HIGH AS TO BE PROHIBITION

Asserted a Reduction Will Increase Government Revenues Ten Per Cent. Full Hearings by the Ways and Means Committee Favored and the Schedules That Will Meet Difference in Cost of Materials

Washington, Nov. 11—Congressman J. W. Babcock of Wisconsin, chairman of the Republican congressional committee and a member of the ways and means committee of the house, has declared for tariff revision and predicts that President Roosevelt will call an extra session of congress after March 4 to revise the tariff schedules.

"Tariff revision is about the only subject I have heard discussed thus far in connection with future legislation," said Babcock today. "I believe it will be done. The northwestern states I knew demand some such action."

Mr. Babcock favors an extra session which shall consider no other topic of legislation. He favors full hearings by the ways and means committee and a reduction of schedules until they meet the difference in cost of materials and the price of labor in this country and abroad. He asserts that a reduction in tariff schedules will eventually increase the government revenues 10 per cent through increased importations whereas many of the schedules are now so high as to be prohibitive.

No Hunting in Palestine

The late Bishop Beckwith of Georgia was fond of his gun and spent much of his time hunting, says a representative from the state. One day the bishop was out with dog and gun and met a member of his parish whom he reproved for inattention to his religious duties.

"You should attend church and read your Bible," said the bishop.

"I love my Bible, bishop," was the answer, "and I don't find any mention of the apostles going a shooting."

"No," replied the bishop, "the shooting was very poor in Palestine so they went fishing instead."—Nashville Banner.

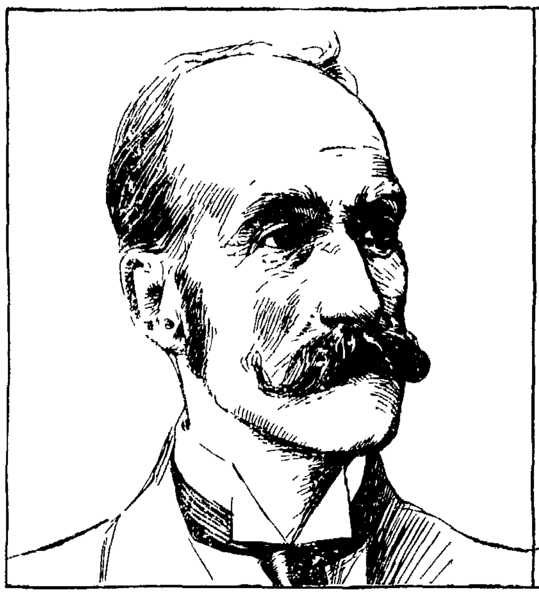
The Bear's Maladroitness Becomes a Menace

AT the moment of its occurrence it did not seem that any more trying episode than the passage of the Dardanelles and the seizure of a neutral merchantman would be likely to precipitate Russia into a quarrel with her European neighbors Having escaped the consequences of that blunder it was only reasonable to suppose that a nation so deeply involved in a struggle which was demanding its closest attention would steer clear of any fresh complication which could be avoided For that reason and for many others the news of the North sea exploit of the Baltic fleet came like a thunderbolt in a clear sky

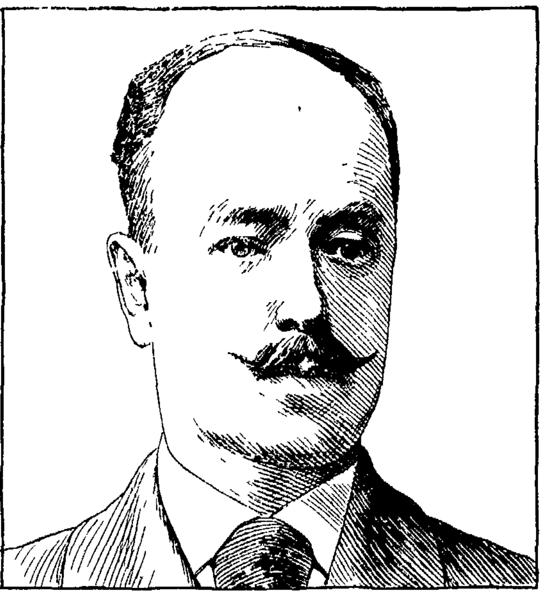
It is known to all civilized mankind that Russia has no reason to regard Great Britain with tenderness From the first hint of impending trouble in the east the English have been outspoken in their sympathy for Japan and their criticism of Russia It is much more than suspected at St Petersburg that their agile foes have been assisted in their operations against the Muscovites by agencies more tangible than sympathy Be this true or not the fact remains that England is more hated in Russian diplomatic circles than is Japan It is inevitable that the bad blood which for so long a period has been clogging the amicable circulation between these two great powers should sooner or later breed mischief

This mutual dislike is not of recent origin It was born of distrust and national greed for more territory It began when Russia first permitted her desire to extend her boundary eastward to become public Every step that Russia made to lessen the distance between that empire and British Asia has acted as a fresh irritant Russian success in her diplomatic intercourse with China has been a source of constant menace to British influence on the east Asian littoral and every concession obtained by the bear has been received with a growl by the lion

At the conclusion of the last Chino-Japanese war when it became apparent that Russia was to come into possession of all the advantage resulting from that conflict England was only a degree less furious than Japan From that moment restoration of amicable relations between the rival powers was not to be expected The requirements of diplomacy preserved the external semblance of calm but the merest dabbler in international ethics was not deceived



MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE, ENGLAND'S MINISTER OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS



COUNT LAMSDORFF, RUSSIA'S MINISTER OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS

But although Russia would hail with gladness a feasible proposition to submerge the British Isles as she has threatened the little empire of her other insular enemy she must not be accredited with the impossible stupidity of choosing this time for a naval demonstration like that recently made off Hull In the light of her puerile showing in the present campaign and with the evidence of her uninterrupted series of naval blunders still fresh in the mind it is possible to account for some of Russia's misadventures but there could be found only one explanation of such a craven act the desire to provoke immediate war

Owing to the constant reverses that Russia has suffered since the beginning of the campaign it has been openly hinted in certain quarters that she is on the lookout for some means less undignified than absolute surrender to put an end to her dilemma One way of accomplishing this would be to assume increased bravado and become involved in war with other powers The ignominy of being overcome by Japan would be a crushing blow to a nation which has been accorded the supremacy in resources by all the powers and has boasted of its record of perpetual victory It would be vastly less humiliating and scarcely less expensive in the end to preserve the appearance of a great power beset by a combination of foes The national pride would suffer but it would not be extinguished and would in time recover Even the national credit would be saved from shipwreck There would always remain the possibility that in the final adjustment diplomacy might step in and secure some of the benefits that war could not obtain Events have made it manifest that Russia is more fortunate in diplomacy than in war Having lost her reputation as a fighting nation she might possibly retain her prestige in the diplomatic world

Even at the early period of the passing of the Dardanelles incident it was suggested by competent authority that the experiment was to be tried Some of those who took this view of the matter are still firm in the conviction that the St Petersburg government meant nothing less than a quarrel with England but was frightened off by the immediate complications which supervened and that the subsequent overhauling of a German vessel was a subterfuge to divert attention from the original intention Although the episode resulted only in smoke and passed quickly out of the public mind there is no popular explanation of the conduct of Russia in the matter There is not even a record that the officious and ultra patriotic skippers of the so called volunteer ships were reprimanded for their essays at pernicious activity It is evident that Russia has not exercised extraordinary care to prevent an open rupture with England It is a well known fact that Englishmen who for any cause have had occasion to visit the Russian empire since the breaking out of hostilities have met with scant courtesy The court of St Petersburg is the most ceremonious in the world but every Englishman within its influence has been made to feel that he is persona non grata

Russia cannot persuade the world that she is anxious to cross swords with England in a legitimate fashion If she should force a quarrel her motive would be patent to the most unsophisticated Even though the czar might transport a fair proportion of the unnumbered millions that swarm the Slavic plain to Albion's perfidious shore he could not land one of them The prudent islanders have looked out for such an emergency It is possible that a venturesome Russian cruiser might creep along the coast and startle some little hamlet perched on a chalk cliff by firing a rocket or a hand grenade but before a flotilla of warships could come within firing distance of British soil it must have met and vanquished such a naval force as Russia does not command Re-enforced by all the available sea armament of her financial ally across the channel Russia would indeed be able to make a tolerable showing but there is little probability that Gallic friendship will be put to such a test The French have an abiding respect for the British coast defense system a respect which is the outcome of close observation and an exact knowledge of the difficulty which would face any power desirous of obtaining a foothold in that well guarded country Russia must remember however that there is a limit to neutral endurance The time is at hand when her maladroitness will require a more material condonation than can be made by apology

CHANNING A BARTOW

Fushimi, Japan's Royal Hero, to Visit America

AMONG the distinguished foreigners attracted to American shores by the fame of the Louisiana Purchase exposition Lieutenant General Prince Sadanaru Fushimi who is now with his retinue touring in America is the most notable It is true that several other personages of royal extraction have preceded him among them certain scions of the Portuguese family which once ruled Brazil This Japanese tourist is not only a nephew of the reigning sovereign of the island kingdom but he has won a reputation of being one of the most dashing and gallant officers in his royal uncle's army

The Japanese legation at Washington fully awake to the importance of the occasion has been active in paving the way for the prince's first visit to America It was necessary to acquaint the government with the intention of the Japanese ruler to send his near relative and most trusted associate on a friendly tour of inspection in the United States Particular stress was put upon the coming visitor's rank and the unusual conditions which made his visit possible It was explained with true Japanese explicitness that the prince although he was consumed with a desire to witness for himself the prosperity of the great American people had been loath to leave his command at this critical moment in his country's career but that his physical condition was such that the mikado was unwilling to expose so valuable a life to further peril in Manchuria and had made the American tour mandatory

Although there is not the slightest official sanction to the notion it would probably be met at the legation by a dignified and most positive denial it has occurred to many persons that the prince's coming may have a quasi political significance He is reputed to be a man of singularly attractive personality and it is argued that his presence at this particular time will do wonders toward perpetuating pro Japanese sentiment which is already exceedingly strong in the United States

Notwithstanding the fact that he comes divested of all appearance of official importance Prince Fushimi will be accorded the attention which is due his rank by the government It is expected that his progress through the country will be marked by elaborate official and unofficial ceremonies Even if he were not a prince his record as a victorious general would entitle him to the endless series of receptions dinners and other functions with which the generous Americans overwhelm all those who have made themselves conspicuous for heroism Of course the government will so temper its official hospitality that the representatives of other powers cannot find cause for offense that is one of the chief accomplishments of diplomacy

The prince will be invited to dine at the White House As a member of the ruling house of Japan he will be entitled to a military escort while in Washington as was Prince Henry of Prussia who was entertained at the presidential mansion in 1902

There will of course be a reception at the Japanese legation and it will probably prove to be a social revelation to the capital's official circles As it will be early in the season these functions will attract widespread attention and the competition to secure the coveted invitations has already begun

The official festivities will be followed by a round of private hospitality which will surpass in lavish outlay anything heretofore known to Washington society Since Prince Fushimi expects to remain in the United States for at least a month and hopes to visit all the principal cities in the Union there is no doubt that the capital's hospitable example will be followed in all parts of the country In point of fact the prince will be given many an opportunity to test American hospitality before he reaches the capital since he and his party will proceed by easy stages to Washington

Prince Fushimi's visit will be watched with great interest by the representatives of European powers in this country If he had included a tour of Europe in his itinerary speculation would not have been so certain to follow It is the fact that this man vested with all the rank that birth and a grateful country can bestow has been selected to go in the guise of a private citizen to a country whose continued good will and moral support are all important that interests the men who serve their respective governments in the field of diplomacy That they do not find in the St Louis exposition a magnet of sufficient potency to account for Prince Fushimi's withdrawal from a victorious career in Manchuria is hardly to be wondered at Simple declarations unsupported by positive evidence do not carry great weight in diplomacy Besides it is the province of diplomacy to watch and the prince's every movement will be subject to the closest scrutiny

American visitors to Japan in former years are greatly indebted to Prince Fushimi for numerous social favors He has always manifested a warm friendship for the people of the western world and is an outspoken admirer of American institutions Owing to his exalted rank he has held the position of social almoner at the court Many foreigners are indebted to him for their opportunity to inspect Japan's most exclusive circles at close range

In the Chino Japanese war Prince Fushimi served with distinction having on more than one occasion proved his courage by leading his men in perilous undertakings He manifested such remarkable unconcern as to his personal safety that by the mikado's orders a special guard was detailed to keep watch of his movements At the close of that campaign he was elevated to the rank of senior imperial prince He was most efficient in the preparations which were made for the war with Russia and at the breaking out of hostilities he was made commander of the First division of the reorganized Japanese army

Prince Fushimi led the attack made by the First division at the sanguinary battle of Nanshan Hill His division was sent to capture a position which the Russian military engineers had declared to be impregnable A series of formidable earthworks from behind which the Russian field artillery delivered a constant and most deadly fire had to be silenced and the ranks of advancing Japanese were thrown into confusion by the rapid fire Realizing that the situation was desperate the prince exhorted his men to make a last impetuous charge and put himself at the head of the hesitating column The movement was successful and the Japanese drove the Muscovites from the trenches and obtained possession of the guns These they put to such successful use that the disorganized Russians could not regain the position although they contested the ground stubbornly Prince Fushimi and his victorious division were the heroes of the day and all Japan hailed them as such

ALBERT O WEBER

Incapacity of Russia to Assume the Offensive

IN view of the possibilities suggested by the recent Baltic fleet misadventure off Hull it is interesting and by no means difficult to fix upon some of the problems which would confront Russia in the event of an open quarrel with England

It needs only a glance at the map of Europe to make it clear that the Russian empire's geographical position with reference to that of her powerful adversary would be particularly unfortunate in at least one respect her scanty allotment of seacoast privileges however admirably it might serve her under other conditions as for example in the event of a naval invasion by a distant power with no nearby base of supplies would make it comparatively easy for an enemy with Great Britain's naval resources to dispute successfully the egress of any hostile armament from her few and landlocked harbors

Nature has not only manifested a remarkable parsimony in regard to Russia's seacoast boundary but has interposed stupendous difficulties in the way of making available the little she has given All the navigable water which is the exclusive property of the Russian empire may be entered only by means of contracted water gates of natural interposition or during the short subarctic summer Russia in Europe has practically only two means of marine egress within both of which she has established naval bases She may emerge from the Baltic and enter the open roadstead of the North sea only through the treacherous channels of the ill famed Cattegat and Skager Rack Although her right of way to these tortuous entrances is unchallenged by mortal power the fates offer her continual resistance She has not even the consolation that this only outlet to her northern stronghold of Cronstadt and the splendid city she has built on the banks of the Neva is through her own property Before she can reach the undisputed sea she must pass bristling German fortifications and the not less formidable defenses of the Danish islands and the Scandinavian mainland

The southern outlet is still more effectually hampered by equally positive restriction Here nature has relaxed but the hand of man has interposed a galling barrier According to the explicit terms of the treaty convention signed by the powers in 1841 Russia may not under any circumstances send an armed vessel of any description through the Dardanelles into the Aegean sea The Ottoman government even reserved the right to forbid the passage of any craft whatever Many years after [illegible] was signed it is true Russia [illegible] in favor of her own [illegible] of the Turkish government [illegible] never been accepted by the powers and the matter is still unsettled

Russia's three fleets are singularly unequal to the prosecution of a successful naval campaign Of the imposing flotilla which less than a twelvemonth ago boasted of its capacity to dominate the north Asian littoral there remains but little beyond the ghastly remnant [illegible] The Black sea fleet [illegible] present [illegible] ran amuck among a peaceful fishing fleet in English waters

With the most perplexing and intractable war on her hands that she has been compelled to face since she became an organized state Russia is in no fit condition to quarrel with England With the exception of the bungling fleet which is ostensibly making its way to the far east to re enforce the almost exterminated naval force in those waters Russia has absolutely no power to [illegible] Her strength [illegible] entirely defensive and any upstart weakling in Europe may affront her with impunity assured that no attempt [illegible] will follow

To make the puerility of Russia's naval power still more appreciable it is only necessary to employ for the purpose of illustration the hypothesis that the admiral of the Baltic fleet with England still unpacified over the naval contretemps at Hull had continued his voyage eastward and had made up his mind to enter the Mediterranean The [illegible] of such a conclusion is apparent when it is recalled that before [illegible]

Since [illegible] the historical fortress has [illegible] crown colony of Great Britain [illegible] the administration of a governor [illegible] standing on a rocky promontory jutting into the bay of Algeciras It was formerly a part of the Spanish province of Andalusia and is directly opposite the town of Algeciras six miles across the bay and connected by a ferry On account of its strategical position it has long been termed the key of the Mediterranean

The promontory itself called 'the rock of Gibraltar' is of gray marble and has a certain resemblance in form to a lion although this is not apparent to all observers The rock is nearly three miles in length and fully three-quarters of a mile in breadth It rises precipitously from the water to a height of nearly 1,500 feet and from the water presents a barren and decidedly unattractive appearance A closer acquaintance however shows that the spot has been made quite habitable

The sides of the rock are honeycombed with fortified artificial galleries The town and fine modern harbor on the west are protected by a sea wall with bastions and by batteries and forts rising to the top of the rock The fortifications are supplied with the most formidable modern guns that are made As fast as they become a trifle out of date they are replaced by new ones of the most approved patterns In time of peace the garrison consists of about [illegible]000 men

In the year 711 an Arab chief took possession of the rock and built a fortress there part of which is standing today After the Arabs had held the spot for 500 years the Castilians captured it but a few years later it was retaken by the former occupants Barbarossa sacked it in 1540 and afterward extensive works were built by Charles V In 1704 it was occupied by combined Dutch and English forces and the English expelled the Dutch and took full possession

The expected has happened

Theodore Roosevelt is elected president of the United States by an overwhelming majority

The campaign just closed will long be remembered as perhaps the most remarkable episode in the history of the country It may be said to have been opened more than a year ago when Mr Roosevelt frankly announced his wish for the nomination and as frankly appealed to the people for their indorsement and approval He assumed no airs of coyness or hesitation and resorted to no pretenses of any kind whatever On the contrary he discarded all the time honored subterfuges employed by aspirants in his position honestly proclaimed his ambitions and without the smallest effort at concealment addressed himself to their promotion As he began so he continued to the end Taking the country into his confidence at the outset and conducting his own case in the broadest light of public observation he rounded off a work so well begun by establishing a campaign machinery patterned modeled and conducted by himself He ignored leaders and experts grown gray in the service and elected Cortelyou for chairman of the committee All the hallowed customs and traditions of party organization and management were set aside From first to last it was Theodore Roosevelt's campaign

His declaration made last week to the effect that if elected he would take office absolutely unpledged to any combination or individual political commercial or financial was made we verily believe in perfect faith Whatever understanding or impression others may entertain we are quite sure that he expressed his own conviction and that he will act accordingly If events bring disappointment to any one he at least will have no occasion for self reproach nor any fear of legitimate upbraiding from the disappointed If seekers after special favor or undue privilege hereafter nurse resentment they will have themselves to blame for self deception Mr Roosevelt has authorized these inferences by his own solemn and deliberate words and we believe they were spoken in absolute sincerity There are those who think him rash impetuous more inclined to conflict than diplomacy These facile judgments are born of the very impulses and extravagances they arraign They count for nothing Nobody of consequence and character has challenged his good faith and none is likely to That is the matter of real moment with the people

Thus Mr Roosevelt having come into his own enjoys not only the vast power of his lofty place but an opportunity such as has been vouchsafed few men in this or any other age Bound by no pledges embarrassed by no debts or bargains free to act according to his conscience and to realize every pure and patriotic aspiration he is to be envied by the most powerful among the rulers of the world With an empire at his feet it is for him to say how high and nobly he will lift his head —Washington Post

Republican Sentiment as Marked by Congress.

The Republicans will have in the next house 245 members, the Democrats 141 This is a gain of thirty six members The gains are in states where party issues were sharply defined and they indicate hearty approval of Republican policies as to money, the trusts the tariff and the Philippines

For the first time in many years Chicago has a solid Republican delegation in congress and it is significant that in every large city except Boston the Republicans made gains in the presidential vote and in congressmen

In the Forty-Third congress elected in 1872 the Republicans had 203 members and the Democrats eighty eight Republican majority 115 In the Forty Fourth congress there were 181 Democrats to 107 Republicans Democratic majority seventy four In the house elected in 1880 there were 152 Republicans 130 Democrats 9 Nationals and two Readjusters In the house elected in 1882 there were 200 Democrats 119 Republicans four Independents and two Nationals

In the Forty Ninth congress elected in the presidential year of 1884 there were 182 Democrats and 140 Republicans in the Fiftieth congress 170 Democrats 151 Republicans one Independent and three Laborites

In the Fifty First congress elected in 1888 there were 173 Republicans, 156 Democrats and one Independent In the Fifty Second congress elected in the off year of 1890 there were 231 Democrats eighty eight Republicans and fourteen Populists In the congress elected in the presidential year of 1892 there were 220 Democrats 128 Republicans and eight Populists

In 1894 however there was a reaction against the Democrats and 245 Republicans 164 Democrats one Silverite and seven Populists were elected to the Fifty Fourth congress

This represented the high tide of popular sentiment up to that time in favor of Republican tariff and financial policies In the Fifty Fifth congress elected in 1896 there were 206 Republicans 121 Democrats twenty one Populists three Silverites and four Independents In the congress elected in 1898 the Republicans lost ground having 185 members to 161 Democrats five Populists and three Silverites

The figures changed in the Fifty Seventh congress elected in 1900 to 197 Republicans 152 Democrats and eight Populists and in the Fifty Eighth congress elected in 1902 to 209 Republi*cans and 177 Democrats*

The year 1904 marks the high tide of Republican sentiment as registered in congress in the last decade The next house will have 245 Republicans to 141 Democrats a Republican majority of 104 the largest since the uprising against the Democratic tariff policy in 1894

*The election of Tuesday extends con*tinuous Republican control of congress to twelve years A longer tenure depends on the use that is made of the majority of nearly one hundred in the Fifty Ninth congress—Chicago Inter Ocean

LITTLE STORIES TOLD ABOUT PUBLIC PEOPLE

Prayer of the Pious

I chanced to be on the battleship Oregon on its famous trip around the world said Charles Gunn of the United States navy the other night Among our crew was one of the most pious men I ever saw This fellow had been warned that on the next day a great battle would probably be fought Being in the next room I heard him when he prayed that night lay special stress that the vessel upon which he and his companions were serving might escape danger He said among other things

Oh Lord shield us from the danger of the shots and other projectiles of the enemy but if any shells and solid shot do come to our vessel I pray Thee that they may be distributed as prize money is distributed—mostly among the officers —Boston Post

Prayer for Bread

In a nearby town there is a family which buys its bread from a baker named Daley Over this bread the father of the house every morning says the Lord's prayer as the first grace of the day

Ever since she has been admitted to the grown ups table Edith six has listened attentively Friendliness with the cook has afforded her opportunity to watch the baker wagon each day and to her the give us our daily bread has had a special significance

The other day she began to think this plea for one particular baker's [illegible] was a trifle tedious and as soon as her father finished prayer she said

Papa isn't there any other baker in town cept that man Daley? —Philadelphia Inquirer

Nothing Surprising

Bradley Martin Jr who has recently been married to Miss Phipps of Pittsburg has a dry humor that has been likened to Mark Twain's On a visit to America the young man went to Niagara for the first time

He was accompanied on this tour by a Harvard instructor who admires nature profoundly The instructor hoped to see Mr Martin impressed almost overcome by Niagara's grandeur The young man for a joke was determined to disappoint his friend

Their first view of the falls was by moonlight The great white water was beautiful under the pale light of the moon and the air was filled with deep sweet music Mr Martin really was moved but he yawned lighted a cigaret and said

Let's be going

His poor friend was thunderstruck at such indifference

Why he cried where are your eyes? Aren't you amazed? Aren't you impressed Aren't you transported?

Of course not said Mr Martin What is here to make such a fuss about?

Look cried the Harvard man look how that mighty river pours over into that abyss

Well said Mr Martin what is there to prevent it? —Buffalo Enquirer

Death of General Kuroki

Moscow Nov 14—*Nemirovich Dan*chenko a Russian war correspondent telegraphing from Mukden says the reports of the death of General Kuroki are confirmed According to his version a splinter of a shell struck General Kuroki tearing out a portion of his breast and abdomen He died on Oct [illegible] at Liaoyang and his body was sent to Japan A rumor is persistent is circulated that a kinsman of the mikado Siaosanji literally Little Third Prince has been appointed to succeed General Kuroki

An African Showplace.

The great Victoria falls of the Zambesi are to be made one of the show places of the earth They are 1,600 miles inland from Cape Town yet so many tourists are already visiting the falls now that *the railroad is com*pleted that a small hotel fitted with electric lights and ice chambers and electric fans to counteract the effects of the tropical heat has been opened This is only a temporary convenience for a big hotel is now building

It is the intention to keep the falls as free from distractions and everything unsightly as possible The site of the town that is springing up is about three miles from the falls The railroad will cross the gorge a few hundred yards below them on the steel suspension bridge now building but from no point where the falls can be viewed can the railroad be seen The policy is to preserve unimpaired the beauty of the falls and their surroundings

The finest views of this fascinating wonder of nature are obtained on the south side of the Zambesi and along this shore of the river of the Park of Peace is now being laid out In this park good roads will lead to every point of vantage along the river bank where the various aspects of the falls may be seen to the best advantage The falls are so large that they cannot be observed in their entirety from any point but the major attractions are in view from the southern bank

The only building permitted in the park will be the large hotel five stories in height which the railroad company is now putting up It will be completed in time for the meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science which will be there in a few months the first body of scientific men to meet in Central Africa

On the north side of the river but some distance from the falls another park is being laid out with zoological gardens grounds for sports and other attractions This park will be a popular resort while the Park of Peace will be more quiet and especially intended for the display of many species of Central African flora

It will cost a pretty penny to go to these falls and the expense of living there a few days or weeks will be no small item An attraction so far removed from common routes of travel could not draw many visitors if it were not superlative in its quality but it is contended that nothing in the line of water falls equals the beauty and grandeur of Victoria falls Being over a mile wide and 400 feet high they are twice as high as Niagara falls the greatest water power in the world is centered there for engineers say that during the flood season at least [illegible]000 000 horse-power represents the quantity of power continually pouring over the mighty cataracts

It is a curious fact that the least water pours over the falls when the rainy season is in full progress there and when the falls are in flood the country around them is as dry as a bone This shows the bigness of the Zambesi By the time the flood waters of the upper river get down to the falls the rainy season has end in that region —New York Sun

Plain City Man Saves Life of Senator Fairbanks.

Forty years ago when the two were schoolmates in Darby township Union county O Dr T C Robinson of Plain City O saved the life of Senator Charles W Fairbanks of Indiana by pulling him out of Darby creek where they were swimming says the Columbus (O) State Journal

Both boys grew into young manhood intimate friends and the friendship is still unbroken Some two months ago when the Union county home coming drew hundreds of former residents to Marysville Robinson and Fairbanks met for the first time in years Though necessarily brief their meeting was brimful of gladness Robinson in discussing the rescue recently said

As a boy he was a most slight fair and [illegible] For all that he was fond of life and in foot racing and the old style game of ball he beat all of us Then a great game was bull pen four boys within a rectangle and four on the corner bases The fellows on the corners were permitted to throw at the inside with the ball so long as they didn't miss Charley could throw like a shot and there was always a hustle when it came to choosing up to get him His appearance was deceptive in the extreme and he was game to the core

The afternoon I saved his life we went swimming He and I and Henry Morton a cousin of mine The pool was pretty deep in places and Charley in wading tripped [illegible] He went in over his depth and came up sputtering and blowing like a porpoise He had gone down a couple of times before I got where I could get my fingers into his hair and tow him and pull him ashore

When he got so he could speak his first exclamation was Please don't tell mother

Then he promised me a dozen apples and made the same offer to my cousin We finally agreed and didn't tell of it for months He wouldn't admit that he couldn't swim but insisted on going in again and proving that he could Moreover he surprised us both by swimming the creek

Why didn't you swim the first time I asked him

I couldn't get started' he replied The water went down the wrong way

After that I never knew him to have trouble in keeping afloat Before the summer had ended he swam like a duck

Charley began his strenuous life very early When he was three years old his father began building a new house One day while his mother was away at a neighbor's and the men were busy with the new house Charley fired the old one The workmen had *left a lot of shavings against the kitch*en walls and the youngster threw a big brand from the open fireplace among them The house burned down but most of the furniture was saved This was the log cabin in which he was born

We both lived in Darby township about three miles apart and the school house was midway between Both of us walked the mile and a half to school twice a day Frequently on Saturdays we would visit each other Squirrels were plentiful in those days and I used to trap lots of them Charley didn't know how or at least didn't make a success of the part One day he begged me to trap him a squirrel We [illegible] one alive in the afternoon just before he was ready to start home I was carrying it so that it couldn't bite but he insisted upon my letting him have it

Better let me carry it until we get home so I can put it in a box for you I told him but he wouldn't have it so He wanted to carry it whether or not Finally I let him have it He hadn't gone fifty feet before he dropped the squirrel with a yell of pain It had bitten him through the thumb We finally caught another one and this he consented to take home in a box

After his graduation from the Ohio Wesleyan university Charley remained in Union county only a short time In that brief stay however he took his first interest in politics It wasn't a howling success I remember very distinctly along about the middle of the seventies that there was a fight on in the county convention for the nomination for sheriff Darby township had a candidate whom Fairbanks warmly supported When the convention time rolled around the man who was to have placed our candidate in nomination was ill and we were left in the lurch It finally devolved upon young Fairbanks to make the speech

He was a tall not ungraceful but very red faced and bashful youth and his confusion was painful when he arose to make his speech In the middle of it he floundered hopelessly and finally named his man in a desperate effort and sat down His candidate lost but the incident spurred Fairbanks to greater effort He set about organizing a literary debating society and in this cultivated self possession and oratorical ability Before he left to study law he was easily the best speaker in our section of the county and had already begun to give promise of the ability that has marked his later career

Long Belted Overcoats.

THE long belted coat of fancy material is probably the most attractive style and exclusive fashion of the season. We show a wide selection of colorings and patterns, ranging from large indistinct plaids to medium [illegible] and oxford greys. The brown effects form a large part of this showing—in fact everything that is new and wanted can be found here. These coats have the broad shoulders, full gracefully swinging backs and all the details which go to make a cleverly designed garment. These long, roomy overcoats are especially favored by the young men's trade and and are just the smart effect which they like.

Range of prices run from . . . 15 to $25

A WAVE OF PROSPERITY

SUCH IS ANNOUNCEMENT OF SENATE PRESIDENT

Good Crops of Sugar Are Promised and at Increased Prices People Generally Satisfied With the Government Are Tranquil and Content Business Fine

New York Nov 12—The industrial prosperity of Cuba is unprecedented, [illegible] Domingo Mendez Capote of the Cuban senate.

President Capote who has been here since Monday [illegible] today for Havana.

Speaking of the industrial condition in Cuba he said:

Cuba never experienced such a wave of prosperity as is now rolling over the island. Where in former years there was the drowsiness of indifference there is today the hum of industry. Good crops of sugar are promised and at increased prices. The tobacco crop is also satisfactory and brings good prices. The wages of the workingmen are not sufficient I think but means of [illegible] are [illegible].

Has the administration of the Cuban government been satisfactory [illegible] was asked.

Without question, replied Capote. In fact everywhere the [illegible] is expressed with the government and the people are tranquil and content. The people are making money and are interested and busy with their work. Business is fine and stocks and bonds are at the highest price ever known.

Will Palma be re-elected?

It is yet too early to prophesy, Capote [said]; the campaign does not begin until next October. Neither the radicals or the conservative parties have selected any candidate. Speaking for the conservatives I can say they feel very favorably disposed toward President Palma.

President Capote brought his daughter Miss [illegible] Capote to this city, where she will remain through the winter.

THOSE DEAR GIRLS.

Myrtle: "Why is Caroline having her portrait painted?"

Virginia: "She has reached that age when she doesn't look well in a photograph."

THE CRUEL AFTERMATH.

Customer (after looking at everything in the shop): "And have you nothing more to show me?"

Dressmaker: "Yes; your bill."

SO RELIEVED!

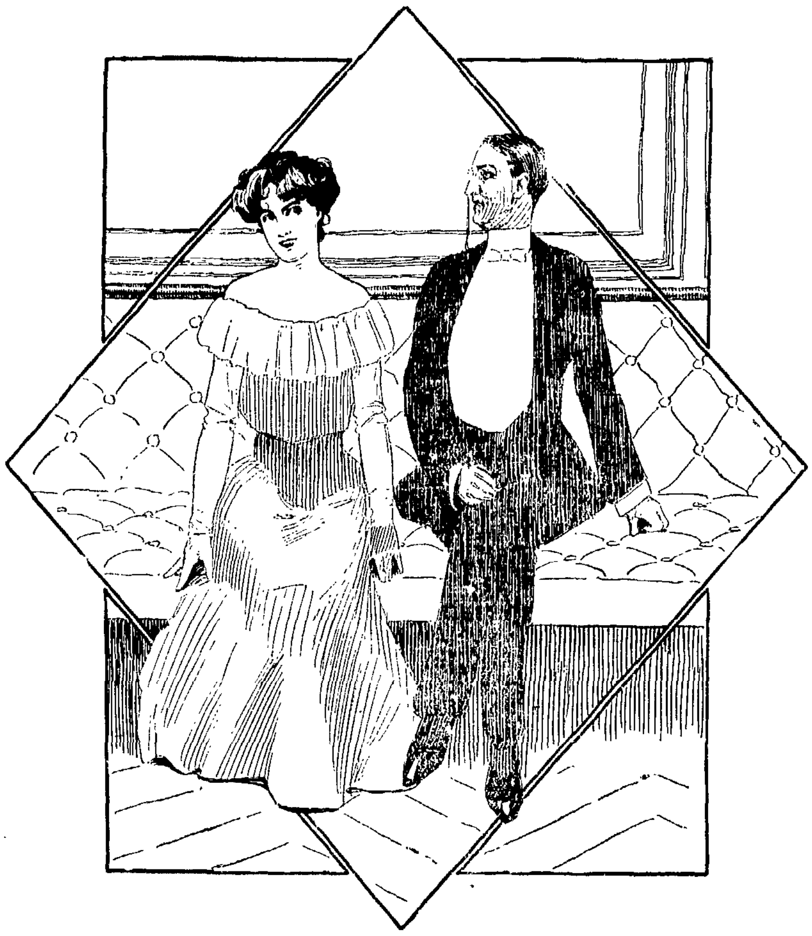
Gertrude: "Why are you so nervous?"

George: "Did I understand you to say that your father is failing?"

Gertrude: "Physically, I mean."

George: "Oh, all right. I was afraid it was something serious."

A MISCONCEPTION.



She: "What is the correct translation of the motto of that lovely ring you gave me?"

He: "Faithful to the last."

She: "The last! How horrid! And you've always told me before that I was the very first!"

HER FAULT.

"She is always jumping to conclusions."

"Yes, I know she is a great reader of novels."

MOST UNPLEASANT.

Jenkins—No, I don't like Wiseman very much.

Swellington—Ah! But when you get him in a reminiscent mood isn't he really delightful?

Jenkins—Hardly. I got him in that sort of mood once, and he recalled a five dollar loan he had made me.

AT THE FANCY BALL.

Polly—The way that man looked at me was positively insulting.

Dolly—Did he stare at you long and insolently?

Polly—No. He gave one glance and then looked at something else.

MAKING IT TENDER.

"What's all that noise out there about, waiter?"

"Didn't you order your steak tender, sir?"

A KICK COMING.

Mother: "Grandma tells me you have not once said 'Good morning' and kissed her this week. I shall really have to punish you."

Child: "Why, mamma? For something I haven't done?"

AN EXPLANATION.

Gayfellow—My wife didn't say a word when I got home at 3 o'clock this morning.

Staylate—How did that happen?

Gayfellow—She wasn't awake.

HIS ONLY REFUGE.

The Parson—Your wife, sir, is trying to run my church.

Scores the Writers of the Vapid Stories of the Day ☙ Some Familiar and by No Means Edifying Types

THE morbid tale has again come into vogue. I would like to ignore it, but I can't after reading the first three stories in a magazine which prides itself on being up to date.

"Gods, what weepful endings!" It again brought me back to my childhood days when I used to break my heart over 'misunderstood' and could only be recalled from dark thoughts of suicide by the appetizing smell of lunch.

He withered flower

If this continues we may yet have magazines of mournfulness instead of magazines of cleverness.

Certain characters inspire literary pathos just as surely as a morphine pill inspires sleep. An author who wants to write a sad tale only has to procure one of these from the fiction property box and his story will be a [illegible] thing. The greatest pathetic drawing card is without doubt the old maid, not the contented old maid—she does not exist in story land—nor the rich old maid, for her lot is too near being enviable, but the poor withered flower of an old maid. She is never large, this old maid of fiction. She is tiny and delicate, with cameolike features and faded blond hair, and the one great romance of her life comes too late, for the hero she silently worships is sublimely unconscious of it. In spite of his gallant attentions to her, attentions which always bring a soft light into her eyes, he only thinks of her as a mother or an elder sister. Presently the blow you have been expecting all through the story falls—he confides his love affair to her and goes down on his knees with the girl to ask her blessing. The concluding scene shows the passe one looking out at the moon or the sunset feeling 'strangely old and shrunken.'

Cheerful reading, isn't it?

'Check' Mates

The young woman married to a rich old husband comes in for her share of tears. Poor thing, she meets the man of her heart too late, too late, and being too moral to be cheerful, she sends him with white lips from her. (I don't know just who the white lips belong to, but they belong in the story all right.)

From this the reader may learn that there are pitfalls in matrimony even, and that she is not out of the woods by a long shot when she escapes spinsterhood.

Oh, why, oh, why does not the lover of the married lady console the spinster before she has reached the inconsolable age? But there! That's a question lots of honest folk vainly ask in real life.

Divorce supplies us with plenty of weepy tales, and the sweet child comes into this sort of fiction as plentifully as it ever did in the palmy days of melodrama. The latest wrinkle, however, is the forsaken wife who tries to win her husband away from the bold, fascinating actress—and fails.

She sends him with white lips from her!

Leaden Hued Stories

The pangs of loneliness, too, receive their share of attention, and those of us who are trying to forget how it felt are enlivened with wash drawings of dreary moonlights and women gazing out at merriment in which they cannot share.

But the very latest wrinkle is the honest fellow who tries to be popular and who only succeeds in being a bore. He falls asleep behind a curtain at the club and learns the bitter truth from the raillery of his fellow club members, and he stumbles forth into the outer darkness forgetting his cane.

Merciful Providence, how it makes your hair stand on end to think you're alive and liable to do some of these things!

I suppose it is peculiar, but one of the most tragic things in life to me is reading the modern fiction magazines and realizing the inky fingers and the aching brains that have rehashed time honored themes so they would pass the editor's desk and pay for the writer's rent or for his new overcoat. I see in fancy the garrets, the studios, the mussy desks, the queer men and women who write sonnets to my lady and stories of life in the Four Hundred, and it sickens me with the whole thing. If I had my way I would either painlessly remove the entire race of scribblers or send them to a useful trade school.

Lack of Originality

There isn't originality in one story out of twenty. Beneath the thin veneer of shopworn imagination one divines the gas bill, the butcher bill and that indefinable taint of the [illegible] man too lazy or too full of silly dreams to do anything really manly or useful. How I despise the male scribbler! The newspaper man we must have, the historian and the great novelist have their lawful places, but the literary hack—bah!

There ought to be just two reasons for writing—a big idea that must be let out or the desire for an audience on the part of a chatty person dissatisfied with the few hearers she has. In either case necessity does not figure, and you are aware that it doesn't by the very tone of the written matter.

But I can't bear to suspect the creaking of mental machinery. Lowell said there were two sources of literary inspiration—fullness of brain and emptiness of pocket. If he could have read modern fiction he would have omitted the first source entirely.

The Bored Married Woman

Another thing which smacks of tragedy in modern fiction life is the married woman who, while everything that she should be, is tired of her husband—pardon me, who is bored with him. We *don't hear so very much about her be*cause she is either supposed to be improper or without a sense of the fitness of things. Of course it should be the other way around, man should be the one to be bored and woman should stay up for him and devise means to keep him from the club, but take my word for it, it isn't always that way in real life. I know of at least half a dozen young matrons who are simply bored to death and sick of life as it is. They are women without talents or else with husbands whose old fashioned ideas will not let them exercise their gifts. They are even deprived of the mild exhilaration of flirting with other men on account of the jealousy of their lords and masters. Their only relaxations are pink teas and inane affairs of that sort. From the bottom of their starved hearts they envy the girls who can do things in the world; they envy even the very working girls; nay, almost the despised spinster.

He falls asleep

But the bored married woman does not reign in fiction. She is too great a blow to the conceit of man—and man helps materially to swell the circulation of the fiction magazine. So we have the disappointed spinster and the sentimental married lady instead. And the sooner they disappear the better.

MISS RUTH MARTIN, "THE TENNESSEE LARK."

For some time Miss Ruth Martin, a young lady of Tennessee, gave singing lessons to the Roosevelt children in the White House. With that fine lack of snobbery which is so admirable in the president's family Mr. Roosevelt introduced Miss Martin at social gatherings and she frequently sang. Her voice was so sweet that she came to be known as "the Tennessee lark." Miss Martin has now gone to Europe to cultivate and make the most of her musical gift.

HOW TO MAKE THE CHILD TRUTHFUL

How to inculcate and encourage truthfulness in the breast of a child is a problem which taxes the judgment of the best among us. It is one of those inevitable problems which no parent can escape, and it may be taken as an axiom that the road to truthfulness must be sought through trust, and trustfulness can only come through mutual sympathy, a sympathy which enables the mother to know what demands she can and ought to make upon the child's obedience to her higher will and which teaches the child uncomplainingly to accept her wishes as law. To win this trust a mother's correction should never outrun her love, and she may well make it a golden maxim never to let the sun go down upon her wrath. If a child once feels that the day has gone by with a loss or lessening of the mother's love, the influence of the mother for good is dangerously weakened, a link is snapped in the chain of trustfulness and a precious idol is in danger of being hopelessly shattered. Undue harshness is one of those irreparable errors we are sure to regret, and as it behooves us to temper our justice with mercy, it is equally important for mothers to temper their reproofs with love. The responsibilities of motherhood are indeed heavy, but they are not beyond their powers, and it is within a mother's scope to control far more fully than she may be ready to acknowledge the environment of her children and to weld their characters for good or evil.

THE PERFECT NOSE

Nothing is more rare than a really perfect nose—that is, one which unites harmony of form, correctness of proportion and proper affinity with the other features.

The following are, according to the rules of art, the conditions requisite to the beauty of this organ:

The nose should have the same length as the forehead and have a slight depression at its root. From its root to its extremity it should follow a perfectly straight line and come exactly over the center of the upper lip. The bridge of the nose, parallel on both sides, should be a little wider in the center. The tip should be neither too thin nor too fleshy, and its lower outline neither narrow nor too wide. The lobes must be gracefully defined by a slight depression. Seen sideways the lower part of the nose will have a third of its total length.

A BRIGHT GIRL

Miss Morse, who has taken the degree of doctor of philosophy at Jena, is the first of her sex to receive that degree from the university. She is a niece of the inventor of the Morse telegraph apparatus.

Why He Married.

Miss Charlotte Dod, the champion woman golfer of England, was talking at the Philadelphia Country club about golf in Scotland.

"Golf in Scotland is almost a disease," she said. "The passion and the perseverance that the Scot brings to golf are quite incredible. With innumerable players there is nothing—nothing—that can compare in their affections with the game.

"I heard not long ago of an elderly bachelor in Edinburgh who had played golf from his boyhood up. He was a lawyer, and every minute he could steal from the courts was devoted to the links. This man allowed neither religion nor society nor business to interfere with his daily golf. He had never courted a girl because, he said, golf hadn't allowed him the time.

"Hence everybody was surprised one day to hear that the crusty old gentleman was to be married. A caddie—the caddies are men in Scotland—went to him, wrung him by the hand and said sentimentally:

"'Man, I'm glad ye're goin' to wed. I think ye must love her dearly. I know your life will be all bliss and sweetness now, and I envy ye the golden days o' romance in store.'

"'Pooh, pooh, Robert,' said the other. 'It's nothing of that sort. Macminn, the champion, took a wife last year, and it improved his game. I am just taking one in the hope that it will improve mine.'"—San Antonio Express.

Spreckel's Story.

On a trip to California Claus Spreckels was induced by a friend to indorse a well-known Kentuckian's note for $1,500.

Going afterward to Harrodsburg, the man's home, he discovered the fact that all of his property was in his wife's name and therefore exempt from the debt of $1,500.

Some months later Spreckels was sitting in the lobby of the Ebbitt House at Washington reading a paper, when the same friend came up and accosted him.

"Do you know what's the matter with Blank?" asked he.

"No," said Spreckles. "What?"

"He's got rheumatism," answered the friend.

Mr. Spreckels returned to the perusal of his paper.

"Has he got it in his wife's name?" he asked casually.—New York Times.

Pernicious Law.

Senator Tillman of South Carolina is the father of the dispensary system which controls the liquor traffic of that state. He tells a story about an Irishman who was bitterly opposed to the restriction of the traffic.

"My friends from the ole counthree," says the senator, "was fond of the crathur comforts wanst in a while, and sometimes oftener. He was agin the law from the start, and one day I met him. He wore a rueful countenance and said to me:

"'Ye are hathens to make sich a law, Misthur Tillman. It gives me heart a big sthroke. Divil a wonder they call it the Maine law. Phat will we do at the wakes I dunno now. It's the bad times intirely when a man can't bury his friends decently, nor himself nuther. It is my opinion that the law is calkerlated to bring great distress not only on the livin' but on the dead. Bad luck to it.'"—Nashville Banner.

An Ode of Turkey Time

Now the turkey steps forth grandly to the center of the stage;
Now the publisher gives orders for a turkey sketch—front page;
Now the artist turns to turkey in a dull and listless way;
Now the bard in desperation wonders what is new to say.
The markets groan with turkeys, young and tender, old and tough;
There is turkey all about us, but we cannot get enough.

There are turkeys adolescent, there are turkeys in their teens;
There are turkeys in the papers, turkeys in the magazines;
There are turkeys in the stories, there are turkeys in the news;
There are turkeys in the columns of the dignified reviews;
There are turkeys in the love tales, there are turkeys in the books;
There are turkeys simply fashioned, there are turkeys quite de luxe.

There are turkeys in the poems, there are turkeys in the plays;
There are turkeys in the ovens, there are turkeys on the drays;
There are turkeys in the grab bag at the sewing circle's fair;
There are turkeys in the kitchen, there are turkeys on the stair;
There are turkeys in the sketches, there are turkeys in the yard;
For the frost is on the pumpkin, and the turkey's on the card.

There's a [illegible] of turkeys from the village, vale and farm,
And the turkey ridden husband takes a turkey on his arm;
There are turkeys in the street cars, there are turkeys in the vans;
There are turkeys in the barrels, boxes, bags, crates, bales and cans.
But over and beyond it all an hour of bliss I see
When the turkey's on the table—then it's good enough for me.

Some Distinguished Women Golf Players

OF women who play the fine athletic game of golf in the United States there are few who live in the south. Perhaps the warm climate makes golf too strenuous. Last winter men visitors from the north had midwinter golf at one of the Florida resorts, but northern women players mostly drop the great game when they sojourn during the winter days in the south. Neither does golf apparently appeal to western women as to those of the east. There are a number of clubs in the middle west, particularly in the vicinity of Chicago, but in the qualifying games for the championship of 1901 the western clubs were speedily put out of commission by feminine players of the region around New York, Boston and Philadelphia. It must be that the western athletic girls are not powerfully attracted to the Scotch game or they would have put up a stronger fight.

The real golf enthusiasts among women seem to be confined to the northern Atlantic coast strip—New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The Griscom family, whose country place is near Philadelphia, have done much to popularize the game in America. Mrs. Clement A. Griscom, mother of Miss Frances Griscom, the golf player, last year entertained at her home the British woman champion, Miss Rhona Adair, and this year showed the same gracious hospitality to Miss Charlotte Dod, the present champion of England.

MISS GEORGIANNA BISHOP

Last year Miss Rhona Adair, the pretty and vivacious Irish girl, defeated our American women players in the championship games. After she went back home, however, she said in a conversation with a newspaper correspondent that it was doubtful if British women could continue to hold the championship against American golfers. Miss Adair was greatly impressed with what she called the smart appearance of American women golfers in the field. However intent on the game, the American woman golfer never loses sight of becomingness in the matter of attire on the links. Miss Adair mentioned especially the well cut golfing dress of our players. Indeed, so much attention do some of our ladies pay to their costumes for golfing that there is room for suspicion that the golf links may be merely the arena for exhibiting the costume.

Miss Adair paid a handsome compli*ment to the spirit and behavior of* American women players. She testified that they are thorough sportswomen, equally pleasant as partners or opponents, and that she herself as a foreigner found hearty appreciation, a fair field and no favor. These were kindly and graceful words from one who had beaten our best players.

But this year the tables were turned. Miss Adair's doubt whether British women would be able to hold the golf championship against Americans became an actual negative this year sooner probably than the fine Irish girl expected.

The British woman champion of 1904, Miss Charlotte Dod, has been famous in athletic games over the water for some years. When only seventeen she won the cup given to the best woman tennis player in Great Britain. Twice she won the tennis cup, then turned her attention to golf. The young lady had advantage over most girls in that she had big brothers devoted to outdoor games. These gentlemen kindly coached their sister in her athletic training. It is a wonderful help when the athletic girl has such brothers. Besides getting so fine a training, Miss Dod is naturally muscular and uncommonly tall, with a generous reach of arm.

And yet with all this in her favor Miss Dod was defeated in the first round at match play with an American girl. Miss Pauline Mackay, who defeated Miss Dod, is a Boston girl only twenty years old. She belongs to the Oakley Country club. Miss Mackay has a short forearm swing, which makes her victory over the English champion more notable. It is to be remembered, however, that Miss Dod had not been long in America at the time of the game with Miss Mackay. The game was played on one of those warm autumn days that enervate even Americans who are used to them. Miss Dod, dressed for the cool weather she would have encountered at home in autumn, was oppressed by the heat and rendered languid and nerveless. It is justice to the English girl to say that with a cool bracing day she would have made a better fight.

Some of the best women golfers in this country are Miss Georgianna Bishop of the Brooklawn Golf club, Bridgeport, Conn.; Mrs. E. F. Sanford of the Essex County Country club, Orange, N. J.; Miss Pauline Mackay, [illegible] Boston; Miss K. C. Harley of Fall River, Mass.; Miss Louise Vanderhoef of New York and Miss Frances Griscom of Philadelphia.

It is notable that in feminine golf of 1904 one of the two final contestants for the championship was a married lady, Mrs. E. F. Sanford, and too a lady who did not learn to play golf at all till after the age of thirty. A tradition, superstition, belief or whatever it may be obtains that married women cannot play golf as well as unmarried ones. Whether matrimony shakes their nerves and nerve so that they lose confidence in themselves or whether they lose interest in the game itself is not made plain, but a married woman golfer is not expected to top the heap. It is pleasant to find that Mrs. Sanford has given the prevalent superstition a jolt. She did not fall very far short of being the woman golf champion in the final game, in which she was beaten by Miss Georgianna Bishop. Mrs. Sanford's method is said to be the same as that of Champion Walter J. Travis and consists mainly in patient persistence.

Since Miss Dod, the British champion, was beaten early in the season by an American girl, Georgianna Bishop may be considered the world's woman golf champion, as few women outside of Britain and Americans play the game at all.

It must not be supposed, though, that there are any really great golf players among women, whatever the future may evolve. Not till little girls cease to be held in leash for fear they will get their clothes spoiled, not till they are allowed to run, jump, throw stones, play ball, swim, climb trees and turn handsprings as freely as boys do, above all *not till women give up squeezing them*selves into corsets and wearing long heavy skirts, will there be any feminine golf players worth mentioning. At present the best record of the woman golfer is hardly above that of the average man player.

Meantime golf is one of the best forms of physical exercise for women. It strengthens the muscles of the arms and chest, increases lung power and the ability to walk and run. Physicians prescribe it for their lady patients so as to get them to take exercise in the open air. Women learn also in this fine game to disregard rough weather. The second round for the golf championship this season was played on the worst day of the autumn at the Merion links. It rained [illegible], and the ground was [illegible]. The clothes of the players were soaked through, [illegible] the golf clubs were wet with [illegible], yet the girls played their game out dauntless.

THE PRESENT TYPE OF AMERICAN GIRL.

ONE evening recently a young lady, Miss Gunsaulus, daughter of a well known Chicago clergyman, left her home to put a letter in the mail box near by. As she shoved the letter into the box a man stepped from behind a tree and with one hand grasped her throat. At the same time he raised the other hand threateningly over her head, and that other hand held a stone. Now the old woman type of girl would have fainted on the spot or would have screamed till the burly male protector of womanhood choked her off. Not this young lady. She confesses she was bewildered at first. "I didn't know what to do for an instant," she said.

In that pause of an instant, however, the athletic training she had received at school flashed into her consciousness. Miss Gunsaulus doubled her fist and hit the protector of womanhood a sound blow in the face, and she adds, "I struck the man as hard as I could." The neat feminine blow knocked him back and staggered him for a moment. Perhaps the surprise at finding a girl who could defend herself staggered the footpad as much as the blow itself. At any rate the young lady, having freed herself, took to her heels, the thief after her so soon as he could recover from his astonishment.

But here again that most admirable school physical training came in. It had included jumping and running foot races. [illegible] and fit of wind and limb, the young lady quickly distanced the creature in trousers who tried to pound a woman on the head with a stone.

"I guess he must have been a poor runner," naively remarked the new American girl.

Miss Gunsaulus is a student at the Chicago university, intent on securing for her brains as good an education as she has already achieved for her body.

The American college girl is undoubtedly the best present day type of that new, finer womanhood for which the world has waited. Pioneer mothers and fathers in the newer states saw to it that daughters had equal educational opportunity with sons. About the same time it was found that American womanhood needed physical culture as well as book learning. Girls began to cycle, to play ball, to walk, to run, to swim and row, to spend hours of every week in active outdoor exercise.

The result is manifest. A new girl has come on the scene. She is taller, larger and stronger than her mother was. She is graceful as a goddess, and she knows how to walk, which her mother, trained to the short, affected mincing step of the old woman, did not know how to do. Fashion has announced that the military gait for woman's walk has come in. One may hope this long, even, easy stride, legs from the knees, chest up, chin in, spine straight, will administer a final blow to the feeble, stumpy, semicrippled gait of the old woman.

The foot, the hand, the waist of the new American girl are larger than those of the old one were, fitting the taller, nobler type. The feet can walk, the hands can do useful things, that fuller chest holds a pair of real lungs. Both the foot and hand are better shaped than the old woman's were, for the new girl does not care for baby hands or a Chinese foot. Her feet and hands are made for use.

Along with the rest of her development the new American girl has evolved a face that is different from any other feminine countenance the world has seen. It is certainly beautiful and as delicate as a flower. But the profile is not Greek or English or Irish or anything but her own, though critics admit it is perfect after its kind. The nose is not long, and it is a trifle tip tilted, just sufficiently to give piquancy to the facial expression. Where and how the girl evolved this nose who can tell? Anyway, again it is her own. The chin of the new American girl is scarcely less marked than the nose. It is in striking contrast to the retreating baby chin smothered in fat that was considered beautiful in the old woman. The new American girl's chin is in line with her forehead, neither heavy nor coarse, but strong and slightly squared. And in pluck, will power and intellect the American girl lives up to her nose and chin.

HAPPINESS

The only paradise of man is happiness. A thousand heavens could do no more than make people happy. The happiness is attained by the satisfaction of all human aspiration—all the hungers and thirsts of body, heart and mind. The rounds of the ladder to this paradise are all definite conditions of external nature corresponding to the definite powers of human nature, by fulfilling which man arrives at the goal of happiness. And the angels that assist him in this ascent are the angels of art, science, taste, culture and human love. They are distributed in forms born of the past and of the present; some are descending, having fulfilled their office and delivered up their task to the newer forms that ascend. But they all work together to make life richer, purer, happier, to do away with its rudeness and crudeness and so adorn and refine every part of life that *it may be utilized and minister to hap*piness without causing injury to any.

"What is good for big feet?" was a question addressed to the correspondence editor. "Big shoes," was the reply.
